CRUSH AXIS AGREEMENT UNDER STUDY

Roosevelt, Churchill Reported Considering Three-Point Accord on War.

POOLING PLAN SEEN

Joint Declaration Expected To Take Place of Formal Alliance.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Responsible quarters in Washington today disclosed that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill are considering the conclusion of a formal agreement pledging the United States and Great Britain to work together for victory over the Axis powers.

The agreement, which may take the form of a joint declaration of policy, is expected to be based on the following three major points:

1. A joint pooling of the resources and energies of the United States and the British Empire to crush the Axis;

2. Joint action by the two countries in defending vital points which may be dangerously menaced by any one of the Axis powers;

3. A pledge that no separate peace will be made with any one of the Axis powers without the prior knowledge and consent of both parties.

The agreement also is expected to provide for the adherance of the other associated powers now engaged in the war against the Axis, such as Soviet Russia, the Netherlands, China and the British dominions.

Diplomatic sources believe the agreement is not likely to take the form of an outright alliance. While the British would like an alliance, the president is believed to oppose it.

American quarters believe that an understanding can be reached which will prove just as effective as an alliance for the purpose of winning the war and establishing a sane and lasting peace without departing from America's traditional policy of avoiding "entangling alliances."

An alliance would require senate ratification. That means a debate which might revive isolationist sentiment in the midst of

County Gets Good Start to Reduce Its Traffic Toll

Richland county was off to a good start today in its attempt to reduce the traffic toll in 1942, escaping without a fatality or major accident over the New Year holiday while the rest of the state was chalking up the worst record of any of the 48 states.

A total of 39 persons lost their lives in holiday accidents in the state, 23 of them in traffic mishaps. Illinois was second with 24 violent deaths from all causes. The national toll was 265 over the holiday.

Two drivers who were involved in traffic accidents in the county were fined today in municipal court, one losing his driving permit for a year.

U. S. Ban On New Car Sales 'Freezes' 200 Autos, Trucks In Mansfield; Rationing System Being Organized By OPM

Mansfield's automobile dealers found themselves today with 200 new cars and trucks "frozen" to the sales floors of their show rooms as the result of government orders mobilizing the entire American automobile industry for war production only.

To put the country's army on wheels, and give it the guns, planes and tanks to carry on the war, the factories which in peacetime made four times as many automobiles as the rest of the world put together will be required to halt all manufacture of new cars and light trucks for civilian use "within a few weeks," it was announced in Washington.

The 450,000 passenger cars and the light and heavy trucks now in dealers' hands throughout the nation can be bought only by government, lend-lease, and the most essential civilian users. Pending establishment of a rationing system to handle distribution of these automobiles, the purchase, sale and delivery of all new cars is prohibited.

The sales ban, which had been anticipated by the automobile industry but came earlier than expected, found dealers here with stocks of new cars a little below normal. An immediate effect expected as a result of the order was some curtailment in sales personnel.

It was pointed out, however, that service

POLICE TIGHTEN UP ON ARRESTS IN CAR CRASHES

Traffic Commissioner Says Charges Will Be Pressed In All Violations.

Mansfield motorists involved in automobile accidents in the city will have more than civil damages to worry about in the future. Traffic Commissioner Friend C. Boals announced today that the city's traffic squad would begin tightening up on arrests for any motor violations in accidents.

Previously, police investigated all accidents but usually did not press charges against motorists except upon the complaint of other drivers. From now on according to Boals, the cases with violations will be prosecuted regardless of civil action.

Boals said that at present only two of the patrol's five members are qualified to investigate violations in accidents but that these two would begin operations immediately and that the others will follow suit later.

"By the end of 1942," said Boals, "we hope to be making arrests in at least 70 per cent of the accidents in which some violation of the law is involved."

"Only by striking at the cause of these accidents," Boals continued, "can we curb the alarming increase in faulty driving in the city."

The traffic commissioner explained that most accidents are caused by some driver who has broken one of the city or state driving laws. In the past police have taken the names of the drivers in accidents, seen that the injured persons are taken to the hospital and cleared the street of any wreckage which might cause other accidents.

Except in crashes where serious injury or death resulted the drivers were left to themselves to settle the matter through civil action or insurance companies. Drivers were given no penalties.

Boals said that in the future that drivers breaking regulations will be liable to prosecution and fine or imprisonment.

FDR Lashes Discharging of Loyal 'Foreign' Workers.

WASHINGTON —(UP)— President Roosevelt today denounced as "stupid" and "unjust" the increasing discharges of loyal, efficient workers in American industries "simply because they were born abroad or because they have 'foreign-sounding' names."

"I am deeply concerned over the increasing number of reports of employers discharging workers who happen to be aliens or even foreign-born citizens," he president said in a press conference statement. "This is a very serious matter.

"It is one thing to safeguard American industry, and particularly defense industry, against sabotage; but it is very much another to throw out of work honest and loyal people who, except for the accident of birth, are sincerely patriotic."

Latest to be announced was the appointment of D. D. Cram physical director at the Y. M. C. A., who was named a member of the recreation board to succeed H. W. Arlin and the reappointment of W. C. Mansfield to the city planning commission.

Yesterday the mayor appointed Edward Wyllie, president of the Mansfield Park association, as a member of the Mansfield park commission to succeed Roy W. Vaughn, now a councilman-at-large.

Official Blames Institution Set-up In Bludgeonings.

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. —(AP)— The New Year day bludgeon slaying of three unarmed guards by two inmate sof the Bridgewater state prison farm was attributed today by District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing to faults in the institution's set-up.

The inmates, gassed and clubbed into submission after setting beds afire and holding guards and state policemen at bay for almost two hours in an apparent escape attempt, were taken to the farm hospital, where it was said they probably would recover.

Dewing told newspapermen the pay of the guards—$16 to $24 a week—was too low to attract young, capable men to the job with the result that many of the 250 guards for the more than 2,000 inmates were of advanced years.

GALE BLOWS IN MERCURY DROP

Temperature Due To Fall To 10 Tonight; Wind Damages Buildings In County.

The winter's most severe weather blew into the Mansfield area today on a northwest gale after sections of the middlewest were hit by one of the worst blizzards on record.

Starting to drop shortly before midnight Sunday, the mercury was down to 20 degrees this morning and the weatherman predicted it would go to 10 degrees above zero by tonight.

The weather bureau relaxed its wartime restrictions enough yesterday afternoon to warn of the approach of the cold wave and blizzard which blocked highways in parts of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Iowa and piled the snow high in most of the midwestern states.

Although it was a biting wind that rattled windows in Mansfield this morning, there was only a trace of snow. Rainfall yesterday and last night, however, totaled a half inch in the city area.

Snow was expected to continue this afternoon and tonight as the

METZENBAUM TO OUTLINE CITY'S DEFENSE DUTIES

Senator and Inspector General of Civilian Program To Be In Mansfield Jan. 7.

JAMES METZENBAUM

James Metzenbaum of Cleveland, state senator and inspector general in national civilian defense, will be in Mansfield Wednesday night, Jan. 7, to instruct county councils of civilian defense heads of county, city and township government and all co-operating agencies as to their responsibilities in this time of national emergency.

He will speak at the American Legion home at 8 p. m. after first conferring with Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, Mansfield chairman of civilian defense, who handled arrangements for the meeting. The session is not open to the public, Kalbfleisch said, but is restricted to the groups named.

Metzenbaum, who was one of four inspector generals of civilian defense named by New York's Mayor LaGuardia, national civilian defense director, occupies a position that carries supervisory and educational functions over local and state defense councils. He comes to Mansfield from a similar meeting in Springfield.

Formal notification of the meeting here has been sent to all persons belonging to certified civilian defense councils in Richland county, and to all mayors, township trustees, county commissioners, police, firemen and Red Cross chapters, school district representatives, ex-service men and Y. Weather, Celebrations Cut City Hall 'Open House' Crowd

New holders of Mansfield municipal offices welcomed friends and party workers at an "open house" reception at city hall yesterday morning but there was no danger of being trampled in the rush.

Bad weather and too much New Year celebrating conspired to cut attendance, especially for the early part of the reception. Although the open house was scheduled to be held from 9 to 11 a. m., it was 10 a. m. before any large number of persons arrived.

During the height of the function at about 11 a. m. more than 100 persons were there to congratulate the office-holders, drink punch made of grape juice and ginger ale, nibble at cheese wafers and crackers and to admire floral displays presented by the Republican Women's council.

Although the appointive heads of city departments and many other workers were there, all elective officials were not able to make their appearance. Only four of the nine councilmen attended the greater part of the function with possibly one or two more showing up just before noon.

Most of the guests were received in the office of Mayor W. J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton, while others chatted in the hall of the municipal building.

MacArthur Forces Joined for Last Stand Against Foe In Philippines, Hold Corregidor and Islands That Command Manila Bay.

BULLETIN

TOKYO—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—The Japanese declared officially tonight that General Douglas MacArthur's defense forces had fallen back to the fortress island of Corregidor and the mountainous Batan peninsula for a "last stand" after giving up Manila.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The city of Manila and the United States naval base at nearby Cavite fell into Japanese hands today.

Valiant American and Filipino defenders under Gen. Douglas MacArthur had to abandon the capital and the base, but they still held strong positions north of Manila and on fortified islands that command Manila Bay.

The fall of undefended Manila was announced in a war department communique which said:

"Advanced elements of Japanese troops entered Manila at 3 p. m., Jan. 2, 1942 (Manila time)."

Evacuation of Cavite was reported by the navy in another communique, stating:

"All ships and personnel were removed from the Manila-Cavite area prior to enemy occupation."

HELP: Aid Reported on Way For Army Defending Malaya

(By United Press)

SINGAPORE—A communique issued by the Malaya command at the Kuala Lumpur base in the west coast defense area said today that "considerable help is en route for the armies defending Malay."

It was believed here that the communique was meant to indicate that Sir Henry Pownall new commander in chief in the Far East, intended to fight for every inch of ground and to allay any feeling in the provinces that everything was being sacrificed to the defense of Singapore.

A previous communique had reported that Japanese reinforcements had been landed in Perak province on the west coast and that fighting had been intensified both there and on the main front.

It was admitted that there was little word from the east coast, where the Japanese had claimed the capture of Kuantan, 200 miles from Singapore, but it was said that British patrols and artillery were active.

A Japanese air attack on Singapore island during the night did little damage and caused no casualties, it was said.

British planes, attacking a Japanese airdrome in Kedah province, up the west coast from Penang island, bombed runways and airplanes from low altitude and swept the field with machine gun fire the communique said. Fires were left burning in buildings and

DRIVE: Russians Smashing at Last Nazi Threat to Moscow

BULLETIN

CAIRO—(AP)—British and South African troops have captured Bardia and released 1,000 British prisoners who were held there by the Libyan port's Axis garrison, it was announced today.

(By Associated Press)

Russia's Red armies were reported smashing today at German-held Mozhaisk, the last of the great threats to Moscow, after Adolf Hitler rushed to the front in an attempt to halt the retreat of his battered invasion forces.

Mozhaisk is 57 miles west of Moscow.

Stockholm dispatches said the fuehrer's new headquarters were established near Smolensk, 60 miles behind the fighting zone.

New Soviet triumphs were reported by the Red army command, which announced the recapture of Staritsa, an important rail and Volga river city 125 miles northwest of Moscow, and Kaluga, 110 miles southwest of the capital.

The fall of Starista, marking a 45-mile sweep southwest from Klamin, placed the Russians only 30 miles north of the Volga river port of Rzev, a key rail town.

Red army vanguards were reported only a few miles from Mozhaisk, while Soviet artillery shelled German defenders of the city.

On the North African front, British Middle East headquarters reported the capture of more than 1,000 Axis prisoners in attacks on siege-bound Bardia, near the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, where German and Italian troops have been attempting to create an "Avis Tobruk."

"Operations in the Bardia area are developing satisfactorily," the British communique said, indicat-

RUMOR CAROL TO ASK REBELLION OF RUMANIANS

Friends Report Exiled King Will Call For Overthrow of Axis Government.

(By Wide World)

MEXICO CITY — Friends of Carol, the exiled king of Rumania, say he is definitely on the point of kicking over the traces and calling upon his countrymen to rebel against the Axis.

The exile himself says merely, "any remark I made now would be premature."

Here, in short, is what people close to him declare to be the facts:

He left Rumania in the fall of 1940 after Hitler made it known to him that his departure was the only guarantee against German occupation of his country.

Before leaving he issued a public proclamation naming his son Mihai as his "provisional mandatory" and delivering over to him the powers of state. Carol says he did not abdicate.

His decision to abstain from participation in Rumanian affairs was valid so long as the Rumanian government remained loyal to and obeyed Mihai.

The government of Premier General Antonescu allowed German occupation of Rumanian territory, plunged Rumania into an "absurd" war, permitted young King Mihai's departure from Rumania in "quasi-captivity" and therefore broke all obligations by which Carol feels he might have been bound Mihai was last known to be in Florence, Italy, under the watchful eyes of the German gestapo.

Carol is still tied by fears for the security of his son, but the facts have become "so brutal" that he, as a Rumanian patriot, cannot much longer remain silent.

The reports upon which Carol does not wish to comment, because such comment would be "premature," are that he will shortly go to the United States, declare a "Free Rumanian" movement and place himself at its head.

There are some thousands of Rumanians in the United States who might serve as a nucleus for such a movement There are other thousands in the countries allied with the United States, still others in those few countries yet classed as neutral.

Serious doubts exist as to the popularity in Rumania itself of the war to which Rumania has been made a party, and there are even more serious doubts as to public happiness there over the presence of German soldiers Many believe the country is ripe for rebellion.

Carol had anything but an easy time getting out of Rumania. His train was fired upon enroute and when it arrived at the Spanish border it bore a fine collection of bullet marks.

He spent months in Spain as an unwilling guest. He lived in a fine hotel in Sevilla but when he went out, police were on his trail. He couldn't get an exit permit. He asked permission to go to Portugal but it wasn't allowed. He asked to be allowed to come to America, but nothing happened

Finally he went for a drive with the usual police car behind him stepped on the gas, outdistanced his guards and turned up permit or no permit, in Portugal

In May of 1941 he embarked at Lisbon, still accompanied by Madame Elena Lupescu, who had been with him throughout his adventuresome traveling, and settled for a time in Cuba. He came on to Mexico later in the summer and has been living here since as a refugee

GENERAL MacARTHUR ..... Highlights of His Career ..... Told In Pictures

Douglas MacArthur a brigadier general in France—1918.

Maj. Gen. Edward A. Kreger, judge advocate general, swears in MacArthur as chief-of-staff of the United States army. Secretary of War Patrick Hurley looks on—1930.

Gen. John J. Pershing, MacArthur's old chief during World war I, pins a gold medal on MacArthur for meritorious efforts in emergency conservation—1933.

Manuel Quezon, left, president of the Philippines, and Lieut. Gen. MacArthur pose together in Manila. MacArthur organized Philippine defense and was made field marshal of the islands in 1936.

The latest photo of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of the United States Far East forces and defender of the Philippines against Japanese invaders.

General Douglas MacArthur, whose gallant, brilliant defense of the Philippines against appalling odds has already established him as one of the great military leaders of World war II, was born the son of a soldier. His father was Lieut. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, stationed at Little Rock barracks, in Arkansas, at the time of MacArthur's birth, Jan. 26, 1880. Graduated from West Point in 1903, MacArthur rose rapidly. In 1918 he became a brigadier general and just before the end of World war I was placed in command of the famous 42nd (Rainbow) division. He was appointed superintendent of the United States Military academy in 1919 and created a major general in 1925. In 1930 he was created a full general and became chief-of-staff of the United States army. His tour of duty as chief-of-staff ending in 1935, MacArthur went to the Philippines to organize the defense of those islands. In 1936 President Emanuel Quezon of the Philippines created the title of field marshal of the Philippines for MacArthur. He retired in 1937 and apparently his military career was at an end. But—as in the case of the great German general of World war I, Paul von Hindenburg—retirement was to prove but a prelude to the greater chapters of his career. On July 26, 1941, President Roosevelt appointed MacArthur commanding general of all the United States forces in the Far East. He was at his post when, on Sunday, Dec. 7, war broke over the Philippine islands.

Manila Falls to Japs; U. S. Abandons Cavite Naval Base

States hands for 43 years, had been practically a foregone conclusion ever since last night's war department communique disclosing that American defenders in the north and south had been united.

The approximate position of the new defense line appeared to be a semi-circle anchored on the west at the subsidiary naval base of Olangapo and at an unknown point in the east, north of Manila.

Cavite was the principal U. S. naval base in the Far East. But arrangements long since had been made to base at other points.

"American and Philippine troops are occupying strong positions north of the city and are holding the fortified island of Corregidor and other defenses of Manila bay effectively, preventing the use of this harbor by the enemy," the war department said.

It stated that the "loss of Manila, while serious, has not lessened resistance to the Japanese attacks" on the ground. And it reported that "Japanese air activity is somewhat less in intensity than for several days."

The war department said that the Japanese troops in Manila were reported to be "limited to a size necessary for police duties and maintenance of order."

The naval base at Olangapo is located on the northern end of the mountainous Batan peninsula which stretches down to within a few miles of Corregidor, forming one of the land locks of Manila harbor.

Evacuation of Cavite was accomplished before the Japanese entered the Manila area, the navy said. All records, equipment and stores that might have been of value to the enemy were removed. Naval installations were destroyed, as was the fuel stored at the naval base.

Cavite lies 10 miles southwest of Manila, on the curving shore of Manila bay, which is the greatest land-locked bay in the world.

Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic fleet was understood to have left Cavite some weeks before the outbreak of war, although Hart himself was around Manila a week ago.

Dispatches from Batavia today indicated that some units of the fleet are cooperating with the Dutch defenders of the Netherlands East Indies.

But even after the evacuation of Cavite, the personnel of the naval hospital at Canacao remained at their posts at the naval hospital, "to care for the wounded," the navy said.

Japanese troops presumed to be occupying Cavite were believed to have pushed to the base from the southwest, where landings were effected some time ago in Batangas province.

Occupation of Manila might have been accomplished by segments of the same forces, or by Japanese contingents pushing down the broad valleys northeast of Manila, on the eastern flank of MacArthur's united defense lines.

The strategy of the joining of the north and south defenders was intended to bring the southern fighters to the new line so that they would not be cut off.

In their present position, MacArthur's lines are entrenched on a long front with withdrawals towards the Batan Peninsula a comparatively easy task, in the event such a tactical move becomes necessary.

In Batan's mountains the heroic U. S.-Filipino troops would have some advantage over the Japanese and could, if necessary, fight all the way down to the tip of the peninsula. If necessary they could join the forces on Corregidor Island.

But there are no definite indications here what MacArthur's plans may be. It was pointed out that if he could maintain his present lines for any considerable length of time, new developments might strengthen his position immeasurably.

One thing was certain. Gen. MacArthur will not abandon the fight for the Philippines. He will fight it out to a finish.

That was made clear by Secretary of War Stimson at his New Year day press conference in Washington yesterday. In reply to a question whether the war department had ordered MacArthur to leave the islands in event Manila defenses collapse, Stimson's answer was an emphatic no.

Manila was declared an open city a week ago, and all American defense forces and equipment were withdrawn by MacArthur, who felt that it would be impossible to stage a last-ditch fight in the capital.

MacArthur apparently reached this conclusion by the realization that such a stand would result in great bloodshed among the civilian population, drawing even the death and destruction which was rained on those helpless people by Japanese bombers after the capital was declared open.

Street-to-street defense of Manila would have been a virtual impossibility because much of the city is composed of rows and rows of native huts. Certain sections are built on the American and European pattern, where such fighting might have taken place, but with all means of retreat cut off.

The Japanese drives toward Manila had developed into a multi-columned offensive from the northwest, north, southwest, southeast and south. But the retreat of MacArthur's divisions was orderly on all fronts, a fact proved by the uniting of his forces yesterday.

The communiques from MacArthur have told repeatedly of heavy blows struck against the enemy and the Japanese casualties in reaching Manila must have been very high.

MacArthur's defense has been handicapped by a lack of aerial support to stave off Japanese bombers and harry the Nipponese behind their own lines. The Japanese, for their own part, have been blasting their way with the support of dive bombers and tanks.

two planes were set afire, it was said, and runways were damaged by direct hits.

The Japanese raid on Singapore island lasted only about two minutes, on the basis of bomb blasts heard here. British fighter planes drove off the raiders, and continued patrolling until daybreak.

Front reports said that a Japanese "Tarzan" corps had been thrown into the fighting while behind the lines the Japanese massed reinforcements for a new frontal attack.

Dispatches said the "Tarzan" troops were operating with advanced Japanese patrols, stealing through the jungle and climbing trees from which they sniped at imperial troops at such close range that they were inflicting casualties in men in entrenched positions.

It was believed here that imperial troops still held out at Kuantan, 200 miles up the east coast. Japanese pressure was severe but there was no indication in reports received here that additional reinforcements were being landed on the east coast.

The Malay Mail, a newspaper, published a Kuala Lumpur communique, evidently issued at the federal capital, which said that "it is intended to fight every inch of ground down the peninsula."

"Considerable help is on the way," the communique said. It warned the populace to pay no attention to enemy broadcasts from the station, on Japanese-occupied Penang or to leaflets dropped by Japanese planes.

The Malay Mail, commenting on the communique, said, "the peoples of the Malaya peninsula will welcome with unfeigned relief and gratitude the fighting tone of the communique.

"It may be accepted as a blunt statement of policy which the new commander in chief will put into force and end once and for all that uneasy feeling that everything was to be subordinated to the defense of Singapore," it added.

1,000 Killed In Raid On Rangoon

RANGOON, Burma —(AP)—Casualties in the first mass Japanese air raid upon Rangoon are now known to have totalled 1,000 persons. Losses in a second attack were officially described as negligible.

The Rangoon radio said Allied air losses totaled six planes and six fliers in a defense estimated to have cost the Japanese 40 aircraft and 49 airmen.

The wrecks of 20 Japanese planes were said to litter various places about the city and its environs.

Japanese imperial headquarters claimed that 40 British planes were shot down, eight others were set afire on the ground and a power plant was demolished in the opening raid upon Rangoon Christmas day. It acknowledged the loss of eight Japanese planes, and said another was forced down in neighboring Thailand.

British reports from New Delhi said ten raiding bombers and 10 fighters were known to have been destroyed and others were probably fatally damaged by the defense guns and fliers.

Shelby Youth Listed Among 'Missing' at Pearl Harbor

A Shelby youth, the first from Richland county, was listed among those "missing" today in the Japanese sneak attack on Pear Harbor, Hawaii, Dec. 7.

He is Donald Caplinger, 23, son of L. H. Caplinger, a barber. His mother lives in Crestline.

A terse 11-word telegram from the war department brought the news to the youth's father.

"Your son is reported missing in action at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii," the message said. No further details were given.

Caplinger said he last heard from his son several month's ago. At that time he was a cook on the U. S. S. Arizona, reported by Secretary of Navy Frank Knox to have been sunk by Jap bombs during the Sunday morning raid of the naval base.

Young Caplinger graduated from Crestline high school. He enlisted in the Navy about 18 months ago in Cincinnati. He was born Jan. 18, 1918 in Highland county. Besides his parents he is survived by his grandparents.

Officers said three members of a Mansfield family riding in the car, narrowly escaped serious injury or death. The car was virtually demolished by the impact. In the car were Robert D. Duff, 27, of 731½ South Diamond street; his wife, Rebecca, 22, and their daughter, Marilyn, 4.

Taken into custody at 3:50 yesterday by state patrolmen on a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol, Charles H. Wolfe, 42, of 396 Davis road, pleaded guilty today in municipal court and was fined $75 and costs. His driving license was revoked for one year.

Patrolmen said Wolfe's car was involved in a head-on collision with one driven by James R. Shafer, 24, Cleveland, on U. S. route 30-S about three miles west of the city. No one was injured.

The mayor said that he had not reappointed the service-safety director nor any other departmental heads yet but that they had the authority by state law to continue their work until successors are appointed. The state law says that appointments must be made before the first Monday in February. Former administrations usually announced all appointments upon or shortly after the first of the year.

Airline Pilot

From a factory employe to co-pilot on one of the nation's leading airlines was the jump made by Dwight Terrell, 23, shown above, who graduated only recently from the Civil Pilot Training school at Mansfield's municipal airport. A former enameler at Humphryes Manufacturing company, young Terrell is flying one of United Air Lines giant passenger ships. He recently graduated from the company's pilot training school at Tracey, Calif., his application having been accepted following his completion of the CPT course here. His rate of pay is $300 a month. In three years he will be eligible for a captaincy which pays an annual salary of from $7,000 to $9,500.

mercury drops to what may be the lowest mark of the winter.

Des Moines, Ia., reported 24.5 inches of snow in the past 24 hours, an all-time record for the city, while Los Angeles and San Francisco had their first snowfall in nearly 10 years. The cold blasts swept over the nation from Canada to Mexico, and at Ely, Nev., it was 11 below zero.

Only minor storm damage was reported in Mansfield today, mostly from branches blown from trees. In Cleveland, Mrs. Floranell McCann, 59, was blown off her feet on Euclid avenue in a 45-mile gale. She was treated for cuts and bruises. Six big windows in the offices of a Cleveland firm were smashed by the wind and office furniture was overturned.

The wind kept highway crews busy clearing away huge drifts in northern Illinois, most of Iowa and Wisconsin, and sections of Minnesota. Some railroads and bus lines cancelled their schedules for the day in the stricken area. Trains between Chicago and Minneapolis were from one hour to three hours late.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, JANAUARY 2, 1942.

"Man wants but little here below"—and it looks as if he's going to get it.

According to a British biologist, the world is unfit for babies—and grownups are not having such a good time either.

No fortification or wall is impregnable unless the men who guard it have more faith in themselves than in their wall of defense.

Those Fighting Dutch

THE DUTCH seem to be the greatest boy scouts in military history. They count that day lost whose low-descending sun views at their hands no worthy action done. Their idea of a good deed is to sink a Jap ship, and they have consistently sunk at least one a day ever since that Far East war started.

Their contribution to the good cause has been all the more welcome because, for some reason or other, not much had been expected of them. The other combatants and the world in general seemed to assume that they would just stall along and do a little for the general cause here and there and now and then. Instead, they have come right to the front and been the most consistent and persistent performers in the Far-Eastern drama.

They have reason for fighting hard because, in the Dutch Indies, they have a great, rich domain to preserve. In doing it they are preserving their own home, for they are committed to those Far-Eastern islands as fully as our own ancestors were committed to America in pioneer times.

They were steeled to fight all the more because their European homeland was under the iron heel of the destroyers. And it might have been assumed, from Dutch history, that they would prove their mettle. Even so, the stubborn and aggressive action of those East Indian colonists has been an eye-opener. And they have fought as hard and effectively for their British, Filipino and American allies as for themselves.

Tire Stealing 'Near Treason'

THE Chicago judge who said that theft of automobile tires is "almost treason" hit on something that will arouse more interest as war activities proceed.

Strict rationing makes it particularly important that motorists get all the use possible out of tires they now have, and theft of tires has become a much more serious matter than under ordinary conditions.

Various suggestions have been offered to discourage tire thefts, including locked garages, not leaving the car on the street all night, and taking note of the registered numbers on each tire.

But, with all precautions that can be taken, it is predicted in larger cities that bootlegging stolen auto tires will soon become widespread and the attitude of the Chicago judge in considering this a more than ordinarily serious offense appears fully justified.

The nation is too intently engaged in activities of war against aggressive enemy nations to waste any more time than is necessary in policing the criminals who show themselves unfitted for the privileges they are accorded. As the war proceeds, and as blackouts make it easier for thieves to work, it may be necessary to invoke martial law and summary punishment to prevent spread of a crime wave over the country.

Makes Ready for Active 'Leisure'

EACH TO his liking, of course, and some folks may not be attracted by the idea of retiring from remunerative employment while still enjoying excellent health and at an age when reasonable "expectancy" is for a number of years that might have been devoted to routine work.

This subject comes to mind in association with the year-end retirement of William H. G. Kegg as secretary of Lumbermens Mutual Insurance company, after 38 years of service with that company.

Those who have been so fortunate as to know Mr. Kegg through all, or any part, of the half century that Mansfield has been his home, will appreciate the fine philosophy of life which he has carried into his work as well as into his civic, fraternal and social associations, and will understand that his greater leisure will give no time for idleness—that his problem will be to "find time for all of the things he wants to do."

There is a period in life that is rightfully devoted to gainful employment, and there is enjoyment and satisfaction in the realization of work having been well done—but there is also a time in later life when some people prefer to pattern their days to the performance of deferred tasks and to give more time to travel, study or relaxation.

Such is the decision of Mr. Kegg, and it is the sincere hope of The News-Journal, and of his many friends, that he will be privileged to enjoy many years of active and satisfying "leisure."

Fallacy of Hoarding Cash

THERE is today no occasion for preferring cash in a lockbox to a deposit in the savings or commercial department of the same bank," says an economist and financial writer. He makes the statement in discussing appearance of this kind of hoarding on a rather wide scale.

For one reason or another, some people have gained the mistaken notion that the government intends to freeze bank deposits and compel depositors to invest a large part of their savings in government securities. Such is not the case. In a public statement a short time ago the secretary of the treasury emphasized the fact that defense savings should come out of current incomes and salaries and that no useful purpose could be served by diverting present savings deposits to defense bonds and stamps.

The banks themselves have invested heavily in government bonds. If, then, they had to liquidate those bonds in order to pay out a lot of cash to depositors, there would be no net gain, and might even be a loss to the government.

There is plenty of currency. But getting hold of a generous amount and hoarding it is bad business and bad psychology. Financial authorities both in the government and in private life should reassure the public on this point and give full information on the government's plans for financing the war.

Word comes that even in the great city of Chicago they can find no player of the glockenspiel—which may be just as well, for that matter.

War Quickly Affects Motorists

—By JACK STINNETT

(This is the first of two articles on what World War II means to the American motorist.)

WASHINGTON — The "horse and buggy days" are coming back.

For the first time since the second World War began, Mr. Average American is going to get a jolt where it hurts—in the neck that bends over the steering wheel.

If "the duration" lasts as long as some experts (including Mr. Winston Churchill, who says we'll be ready to take the initiative in 1943) predict, motor traffic will dwindle to a trickle and that story about the man who hadn't seen a horse in 20 years will be as outdated as a bird cage bustle, red flannel underwear and a two-rat hair-do.

THERE is an average of one automobile to every family in the United States. According to the American Automobile Association, three-fourths of all the driving done in these 30-odd million vehicles is necessary to maintenance of the home, office or factory. If driving is drastically curtailed—and it's going to be unless present orders are rescinded—that means that the United States is in for one of he greatest domestic upheavals it has known.

Modern living is geared to the rapid transportation of the automobile and delivery truck. Suburbanites, farmers, factory workers who live miles from their places of business, and scores of other groups will have to rearrange their lives completely if they are, to meet the emergency that will be caused by a vast lack in private transport.

The first blow to be felt and pretty quickly will be the result of the ban on tire sales and subsequently the rationing on such a restricted basis that only cars, trucks and buses deemed vitally necessary to the health and safety of the nation will be able to get rubber on which to roll.

THE second curtailment will NOT be felt until later but if this war does drag out for a couple of years or more, it will put the kiss of death on motor transportation as we think of it today. That is the slash and possibly the complete black-out of new car production. The number of cars coming off the assembly lines has been declining steadily since August. The January total is to be about 25 per cent of normal output—one new car for each four buyers. Later quotas are yet to be set, but the AAA and other organizations already are warning their members that a complete halt in new car production is NOT to be unexpected.

However, because of the reserve of used cars and because many a family bus could be nursed along for almost any conceivable "duration," this possibility is not considered as seriously as the strict rationing order on tires.

Tire stocks consist of between seven and eight million new tires. On a basis of annual production of 48,000,000 in this country, that's about two months' supply. The stock of retreads and rebuilt tires is an unknown quantity, but government guessers think it can't possibly be greater than the new tire stock pile. It is thought certain here that when rationing really gets under way, the retreads and the use of rubber for retreading also will come under the government bans.

This doesn't mean that under rationing, anyone can get tires in the next few months. This possible four months' supply may have to go for a year or more. John Q. Public may learn what it means to do without his full quota of transportation even before he feels the pinch of that staggering new income tax. And that is hardly more than weeks away.

(Tomorrow: Federal tax revenues get a flat tire too.)

Achieve Adaptability

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS BUSINESS of being brave—these people who take life in their stride—who face, with a laugh, any risk—

You've wondered about them, haven't you? Wondered and envied. All the rest of us have to grub and fight for what we get. But those other lucky devils seem endowed with some mysterious power that puts them "tops" under any circumstances. They have "a way with them": they know exactly what to do or say, no matter how tough the going. While you wallow in agonies of self-consciousness, they sail along without batting an eyelash.

BUT HOW? WHAT'S THEIR SECRET?

There's Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the great Arctic explorer. You've heard of him all your life. No man ever faced danger in more varied forms. Even as a youngster, his name was synonymous with incredible spunk. There was no risk he wouldn't run...no test he failed to pass. But even the men who ventured with him were often puzzled. They too knew danger—there wasn't a coward amongst them. But none had Stefansson's chilled steel nerve.

What was its secret? He wasn't, he couldn't be, showing off. Was he, then, "just made that way"...incapable of feeling fear as other men were incapable of hearing or seeing? The world—the envious, timid, uncertain world—wondered.

Stefansson, himself, revealed his secret. Between trips he lectured. In one city, he was slated to speak on "COURAGE." Death by scurvy, starvation, madness ...bear claw and jaw. No man had more first-hand material. Came the night and a mob of twittering ladies, all agog for gruesome details. Blandly, Mr. Stefansson arose.

"You have asked me to speak on courage," he said. "I know nothing whatever about courage. But I will talk instead on that vastly more important quality of ADAPTABILITY."

And, while the ladies goggled and gaped, he did. Ruthlessly he swept away fairly tales...told the truth about Life As Is—and what makes it tick.

COURAGE, nice word. Listens lovely. But it doesn't check with the truth. Courage is something all nice people are supposed to have when they arrive. But do they? Have you or I ever met anyone who was naturally, spontaneously courageous? No, we haven't. Truth is, we're all born afraid. We grow up in an atmosphere of fear. AND THERE'S NOTHING SHAMEFUL ABOUT THIS FACT. It's as impossible to remove this handicap as it would be to remove our skeletons.

But ADAPTABILITY, that's something different. You aren't born with ADAPTABILITY in you, but you can make it. You may not be able to eliminate fear ...but you can adapt yourself to the things which cause fear, AND LICK 'EM TO A FRAZZLE.

It's doubtful if any American school features ADAPTABILITY as a major course. Yet it's probably the leading prerequisite in our modern battle for life and the only one within the practice of plain, practical people.

COURAGE IS A GIMME WORD . . .

ADAPTABILITY IS A GO-GETTEM ATTIDUE.

COURAGE IS SOMETHING YOU'D LIKE...

ADAPTABILITY IS SOMETHING YOU ACHIEVE.

LaGuardia Wants to 'Boss Show', May Leave Civilian Defense Post

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Fiorello LaGuardia will probably go down in history as the best mayor Little Old New York has ever seen. Also he is still remembered in the house of representatives for his far-sighted, peppery statesmanship. But as administrator of civilian defense, the Little Flower, much as we love him, has been a flop.

This didn't matter so much as long as the country was still at peace. But now with blackouts, first aid training, bomb protection a very real thing, civilian defense becomes actually the second line of the nation's defense.

Fiorello still continues to want to boss the whole show, still cannot delegate authority, still has vigorous differences with Mrs. Roosevelt, even to the point of reaching into her division and firing two of her aides. This caused sparks to fly, and the irate First Lady has now rehired her assistants.

The differences between the mayor and Mrs. R. illustrate some of the things which may be wrong with Civilian Defense.

Bandmaster La Guardia.

FIORELLO, in the first place, can't get out of the habit of thinking in terms of the bandmaster or theatrical producer. (His father was an army bandmaster.) He sees uniforms, fire hats, sensational rescuers as movie material.

Mrs. Roosevelt, on the other hand, believes that civilian defense must be built from the ground up, from the poorer people who don't have the price of uniforms, the type of people who have been the backbone of civilian defense in England. She also sees the picture in terms of morale building, and long-range work even in communities where bombs may never fall.

This difference came out sharply when LaGuardia announced that Civilian Defenders would have smart, expensive uniforms designed by Hattie Carnegie. According to Mrs. Roosevelt's friends he wanted the defenders to be slim, slender females, smartly costumed, parading down Fifth avenue, saluting him from the reviewing stand.

But Mrs. Roosevelt wanted the Civilian Defenders to be simple folk who would join for real service and who would wear a costume costing not more than three dollars.

Watch Paul McNutt.

ONE of the great troubles has been that LaGuardia necessarily has had to spend much of his time in New York, but meanwhile insists on passing on minute details. In fact, his office once had to fly an assistant up to New England to catch the mayor and get his initials on some page proofs for a Civil Defense bulletin.

In order to ease LaGuardia to the sidelines, Roosevelt first offered the job to Wendell Willkie, has since been considering the appointment of a chief executive who would really do the job for the Little Flower. But more recently Roosevelt's friends have been urging a complete housecleaning, pointing out that he must profit by the lessons of the Churchill cabinet, and that the time has come when personal friendships cannot be put above wartime efficiency.

Note—Keep an eye on Paul V. McNutt who has done a quiet, efficient job as federal security administrator, to be LaGuardia's successor.

Hitler and Negroes.

AFTER a trip through the south, Chip Robert, ex-secretary of the Democratic national committee, is assuring friends that the Negroes are possibly more opposed to Hitler than the rest of the country.

As an illustration he cites, among other things, a conversation with an old servant in Atlanta, who said:

"Mister Chip, I hear this man Hitler wants to send all the colored folks over to Africa."

"I guess he'd make it pretty bad for all of us, Auntie."

"Well I reckon we've all got to pitch in and win this here war. It'd be awful bad for us if Hitler came over here. I've got a brother in Detroit and my mother in Macon, and the rest of the family scattered all round, and I hopes if we does have to go to Africa, Mister Chip, you'll help to get us all on the same boat.

"But I sure don't like the idea of going to Africa, Mister Chip. Why I hear dey eats folks over there."

Churchill's Old Friends.

ONE of the first persons Winston Churchill met after arriving in Washington was handsome, able Richard G. Casey, Australian minister to the U. S. It was a happy occasion for both.

Last time they had seen each other was two years ago in London, shortly after the outbreak of the war. Casey then was treasurer of the Australian government; Churchill head of the British admiralty.

"Who would have thought then that our next meeting would be here," reminisced Churchill as he shook Casey's hand in the White House. "Or that the United States would be in the war fighting side-by-side with us."

"I'm sure I didn't," said Casey. "And who would have thought our meeting would be at Christmas time. I know that is a good omen."

Robert Montgomery.

A TALL, slim, handsome young fellow in officer's uniform strode up to the entrance of the navy department on Constitution avenue and tried to walk in. A guard stopped him.

The young man looked surprised but he gave his name, and tried again to pass. Again the guard stood in his way. The young man was obliged to cool his heels in the entrance until a superior officer came downstairs to identify him.

Reason for his surprise is that almost everybody, in the navy and out, knows the face and figure of this ex-Hollywood actor, now a naval reserve officer — Robert Montgomery.

Capital Chaff.

PAUL SMITH, new and efficient public relations officer for the navy, was a speech writer and strategy adviser for Wendell Willkie. He was also editor and publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle . . . Winston Churchill didn't know it, but the highest compliment paid to him before he left Washington was the remark by cynical Senator Tydings of Maryland: "You could follow that fellow anywhere." . . . All who lunched or dined with Churchill were impressed with his valor as a trencherman, especially the gusto with which he stowed away little green onions . . . When Churchill disregarded all warnings and strode out into an open square to wave at a crowd, a secret service officer muttered: "That man wants to be shot!" . . . Wendell Willkie sent personal Christmas notes to all the newsmen who covered his 1940 campaign tour.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The largest National Guard armory in the world is on Kings Bridge Road in the Bronx. It has a 220-yard straight-away track. It has a 200-yard pistol range. You can house 2,000 trucks in this inverted, oblong bowl that is made of concrete and steel.

I went up there the other night to see high Army officers review the 8th regiment of the New York State Guard. I saw some 700 trained men, with full equipment, maneuvre with the precision of veterans.

WHEN you consider that they get nothing for it, not one red cent of pay, that they cheerfully devote their nights to the manual of arms after working all day at jobs in offices and in factories, you begin to catch something of the spirit and the pride these men put into their work. Their average age is 28½ years. In the ranks, serving as privates are lawyers and grocery clerks, but drivers and bank tellers. I found one private who was 41 years old. He had a Distinguished Service Cross that he won in the last war. He said, "Sure, I joined up. There's nothing wrong with me. This finger can still squeeze a trigger, can't it?"

That night 200 raw recruits were inducted into the regiment. They stood in the clothes they wore at their jobs, sweaters, overcoats, slouched hats. One man wore a cap with a torn visor.

THESE newcomers had had only one session of drill. They moved through their paces briskly and with alacrity. They were alive. There was a spring in their step. While they drilled the seasoned guardsmen looked on. When their trick was over the entire regiment broke into an exultant cheer.

It was an inspiring spectacle.

All over the country and in all the 79 National Guard armories of the state this same scene was being enacted.

The Guard in New York is open to any loyal, native-born or naturalized citizen between the ages of 18 and 55.

THE physical requirements are not quite as stringent as those required by the regular army.

Uniforms for privates and non-commissioned officers are provided by the state. Officers provide their own.

Nobody gets paid anything. It's for love.

The Commander-in-Chief of the New York Guard is Herbert H Lehman, governor of the state. The commanding general is Major General William Ottmann. Brigadier General George A. Herbst is Chief of Staff.

Well, what's holding you!

A Farmer's Diary

Lost Boy

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

DURING a warm afternoon before the Christmas holidays, when the older children were at school, and the littlest one was napping, I gave our four-year-old a hammer and a screw driver, to go and play about the barn. The southern side was sunny and a warm wind fanned him, chubby in his red snowsuit and cap. I saw him down on his knees beside a boulder pounding the screw driver into the ground and then with great youthful effort, pulling it out again.

Some chickens that had escaped from their corral stood about, watched and sang. The old rooster came dangerously to the little boy in red apparel, but feared to make a sudden blitz.

When I thought he was entertaining himself as any normal youngster should, I went off to do some other work and did not return for two hours. When I looked, the boy was not there. I noticed carefully the holes he had made in the soil and the tracks of chickens who had scratched and wallowed, in the soft moist earth. But the boy was missing.

I called his name in the barn, looked carefully across the straw mow, then anxiously peered into each stable below. I did not see the little red coat and cap nor hear a childish voice in answer.

I ran to the house and asked my wife if she had seen him. No little hands had touched the knob—nor had he come prattling to his mother. We both searched now, more concernedly. Remembering that he is a quiet, gentle child and was once found asleep under somewhat similar circumstances, we ransacked the barn, both high and low.

His mother called, in desperation, from the pond. I ran there. The water was covered by a thin sheet of ice, but out by the end of the chestnut log that stretches into the water, was an open place where the ice was broken. We looked at one another.

"But it isn't deep," I said "Only if he should have fallen in head first."

I knew where the garden rake was hung and went, hesitatingly to get it. It just could not be that he had fallen in. My arms shook and my fingers trembled as I balanced myself on the log and immersed the rake two feet or more into the chilly water, matted with water lily stems.

With each unfruitful prodding of the rake, my heart-ache was more relieved. "No—he isn't there," I told my wife, who ran almost joyfully toward the house.

Here we searched anew, but quietly, so as not to waken the sleeping brother. The school bus arrived with the children home from school. Breathlessly, we explained. Big sister dived into the closet beneath the stairs in search of a change of clothing, before joining the search. A little scarlet heap was there, in the corner—and the little four-year-old, his cheeks all pink from sleep, came out rubbing his eyes and grinning to ask what all the excitement was about.

UNUSUAL DOGS TRAIL COUGARS

Lion Dogs Trained to Aid Hunters Track Down Mountain Lions.

(By United Press)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Training a lion is a full-sized job, but training a lion dog is no cinch itself, says Homer Pickens, New Mexico game warden recognized as an expert in this field.

A lion dog is a dog trained to aid men in hunting mountain lions.

Pickens currently is beginning another long training routine with a pup of Sue II, which he says is "the best lion dog in the country."

A lion dog, according to Pickens, is a study in contradictions.

"The best type is both fierce and gentle," Pickens asserts. "Sue II has participated in 30 kills. She isn't afraid of anything alive. But on the other hand when not hunting she is so sweet tempered I let my young children have her for a pet."

Here is Pickens' lion dog training routine:

"Training the young dog is hard. You've got to know him first. After the dog is matured, the best thing to do is to let him run with an old one, who will show him the tricks. Then you have to get him over the idea of following a deer trail. That's the first thing they want to do—run deer.

"The best lion dog is a combination of bloodhound, red bone, and black and tan hounds. You don't want too fast a dog—that's why you want a bloodhound strain—and you want a dog that can follow a cold trail—that's the hound strain."

On a lion hunt, the dog pack is permitted to run along ridges to pick up the trail and then follow it.

"The dogs always go wild when they see a lion," Pickens says. "They rush for it and the lion usually climbs to the top of a tree."

The hunters, not the dogs, make the kill.

A good lion dog, says Pickens, costs around $200, and he adds that "there aren't many."

He hopes to train "a good one" from Sue II's recent litter of 12 because the mother's usefulness as a lion dog has been ended. She tangled with a bear and came out second best, requiring several months to recover.

Finds Skeleton Of Indian Woman 150 Years Old

FRESNO, Cal. —(INS)— A skeleton of an Indian woman more than 150 years old was unearthed on a ranch by Gordon Hewes, member of the department of anthropology at the University of California.

Hewes was a member of a survey party that located Indian burial grounds throughout the San Joaquin Valley in 1939 and at present is doing graduate work in the subject.

Hewes said the rains of last winter removed most of the top soil from the grave of the Indian woman, whose bones were mostly mineralized. Nearby he found the jaw bones of a large Tule elk and smaller animals.

Usually shells and beads are found in the Indian graves, but in the latest discovery, Hewes said, only a small flint stone was found. He said the skull was without upper teeth.

ing that sharp inroads have been made against that Axis stronghold of resistance 300 miles behind the main battle scene in western Libya.

A British military spokesman said that the bulk of Gen. Erwin Rommel's retreating armies were still fighting in the Agedabia zone, 90 miles south of Bengsi, but that because of bad weather conditions there had been little change in the situation.

Heavy rains were reported hampering mechanized operations on both sides.

A German communique asserted British troops had been thrown back near Agedabia and had suffered heavy losses under Nazi bombing assaults.

Premier Mussolini's high command, reporting violent fighting around Agedabia, said Axis planes attacking the British had "pushed them in a northwest direction."

Possibly aimed at heading off heavy German air attacks against the long British supply and communications lines in Libya, the Royal Air Force has been attacking German air bases on Greece and Greek islands near Turkey as well as a newly-disclosed submarine base.

These attacks have carried as far north as the Athens area, where the port of Piraeus has become a British target as it was a German target in the days before Greece's fall.

British in London followed up the disclosure of a new raid on the Norwegian Lofoten islands, made to obstruct German shipping, with a warlong summary of German air losses. Their tabulation showed about 14 000 German planes destroyed during the war, including 8 935 in the Middle East and Western Europe and 5,000 in Russia. British plane losses were put at 3 961.

the war effort—a development the administration would prefer to avoid.

Therefore, it is thought the agreement probably will take the form of an understanding made binding by a joint declaration of policy.

Whether the agreement will cover peace as well as war aims is not known. The British appear reluctant to discuss post-war problems until victory is in sight. However, it is considered possible that the president and Churchill may reaffirm the principles outlined by them in the Atlantic charter as the basis for a better world order.

London Predicts New Agreement

LONDON—(U.P.)—Well informed sources said today that the talks between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill were likely to result in a sweeping world agreement by anti-Axis nations including a solemn pledge to refrain from concluding a separate peace.

Informants said the agreement would most likely be signed by the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China and that about 20 other anti-Axis powers were expected to join it.

The reported agreement was described as a transformation of the agreement reached by the president and the prime minister at their Atlantic conference last summer into a world freedom agreement.

It was said that the agreement would be expected to reaffirm the Atlantic agreement, including its peace aims, thus identifying all new signatories with the eight basic Atlantic principles.

READY TO SERVE

31 Volunteer as Blood Donors at New London.

NEW LONDON—Sponsored by a group of civic leaders, 31 blood donors have completed tests and are ready for any call from the New London hospital, according to hospital attaches.

In addition, a fund of $26 has been presented the hospital, to be used for a "blood plasma bank." The fund was contributed by the men's organizations of the churches of the village.

Mrs. William Rae, of the hospital staff, helped make Christmas cheery for the patients with a bushel of apples and a bushel of potatoes. The C. E. Ward company presented the institution with a large box of mixed fruits, candy and nuts.

COMSTOCK LODE HAS GLORY DAY

Members of California-Nevada Historical Society Hold Reunion.

(By United Press)

RENO, Nev. — The booming days when Nevada's famous Comstock Lode was young and gold and silver poured from the mines in "limitless" streams came to life for 200 members of the California-Nevada Railroad Historical Society here.

They wheeled old No. 11, brass-bound locomotive of the historic Virginia and Truckee railroad, out of storage and puffed and chugged their way down the same valley through which the old engine had hauled millions of dollars in ore.

Despite its 69 years, No. 11 "ran like a clock," G. C. Russell, engineer, who handled the old locomotive on the trip, said. "Just in case," however, it was assisted in pulling the two coaches and flatcars of the excursion by another and more modern locomotive.

It was over the historic V. & T. that nearly a billion dollars worth of gold and silver ore came during the Comstock's roaring '70's, and it was over the V. & T. that such men as President Grant and Thomas Edison rode on their visits to the great mines. Mark Twain, who got his start as a writer as a cub reporter on Virginia City's old "Territorial Enterprise," knew the line and No. 11 when the latter's big funnel-shaped smokestack and hoarse whistle were still the pride of the Nevada railroad. Mackay, Fair, Flood and O'Brien shipped a good percentage of the ore which made them all millionaires behind the old engine, and frequently rode behind it as passengers.

The fact that the 1941 version of the journey ended at Minden, some 30 miles below Virginia City in the valley, stole little of No. 11's glamour, the excursionists said. Buses took them from there to the Comstock, and when the sightseeing was finished in Virginia City, No. 11 was waiting to carry them back to Reno. The V. & T. track, up the steep canyon to Virginia City was torn up nearly five years ago, when officials of the line "couldn't find enough business up there to keep running on any longer."

RAF Joins In British Raid on Nazi-Held Norwegian Islands

The Royal Air Force covered a surprise blitz raid by Britain's Commandos on Nazi-held southern Norwegian islands. This picture shows the RAF bombing the Herdla airport. The raid lasted five hours and resulted in the destruction of industrial plants, spiking of coastal guns and the capture of garrisons. Top, is the tail wheel of plane from which photo was made. This photo was flashed by radio from London to N. Y.

YEAR'S REPORT SHOWS $15,757 SPENT ON MANSFIELD'S PARKS

The annual report submitted by the Mansfield City park commission showed today that $15,575.13 of the $17,359 appropriated for city parks during 1941 had been spent and that an additional $1,591 30 had been set aside for construction of a new shelter house at Maple lake park.

R. W. Vaughn, president of the board of park commissioners, said that the money for the Maple lake shelter had not been spent because bids low enough to permit construction had not been obtained.

He said that next year the commission would ask city council for an additional $1,500 which, added to the funds already on hand, would assure construction of the building during 1942.

Balance sheets from the Liberty swimming pool disclosed that $1,742 72 was spent for labor and maintenance while $1,924.74 was received from gate receipts.

Allocations to the various parks for labor and maintenance costs totaled $12,124 23. Of this money, $1,888 went to Central park, $2,440 58 to North Lake park, $1,611.64 to Liberty park, $1,842.35 to Middle and South parks, $390.94 to Maple lake park, $1,149.31 to Johns park, $1,057 81 to Prospect park and $1,742.72 for the Liberty park pool.

These allocations are compared with $11,111.57 allocated last year.

Completed during the year with park commission funds and volunteer labor was a new shelter house at Liberty park.

Men Continue To Rule Animated Cartoon Industry

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—There's at least one "man's world" left and it is the animated cartoon industry which employs thousands of artists but numbers only a handful of women.

Dave Fleischer, pioneer movie cartoon producer, said that for some reason or other the ladies of America have entirely overlooked the creative drawing field.

"The animated cartoon industry is almost exclusively a man's world, artistically speaking, and there's no real reason why this should be so," Fleischer said.

"Women have just as much artistic talent as men but they do not, generally speaking, have the courage to express their ideas forcefully. They are apparently mentally timid in the field of art expression as compared to men."

Fleischer said that only one woman worked as a creative artist on his latest production, "Mr. Bug Goes to Town." The rest of the staff was comprised of men. The staff numbered 703.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — Where is our "Rubber Getter"? The OPM tire order, instantaneously and without warning, slipping out from under our domestic economic organization the sea of rubber on which it floats, proves that we have the greatest rubber taker of all times. But where is our "rubber getter"?

Gen. Johnson.

There are several ways to get rubber. One is by a wise planning and organization to conserve its domestic use to the lowest point compatible with our daily national existence. That does not mean simply grabbing it all by an imperial decree, without a thought or plan for civilian necessities or for any madly destructive effect in slowing down national speed for the purposes of both peace and war.

The latter is the easy way for officialdom. It relieves them from most of the work and worry that belongs with their task—for it is as much their duty to preserve at least the skeleton of the domestic structure as it is to provide war material. Yes, it is an easy way but it is arbitrary and destructive—I will even say—a cowardly way.

The reason why that order came out of the blue, with no provision to cushion its possibly terrible effects, was that these officials, though warned for years, had done and planned nothing to prevent or soften the catastrophe it is now imposing.

It didn't expect that to be necessary so soon. Then came Pearl Harbor and OPM was caught asleep on the post as plainly as the garrison at Pearl Harbor. Largely because of the surprise blow in Honolulu and its possible effects through the Far East, OPM had to act at once.

The truth is that we have needed a "rubber getter" all those months and years. We need one now far worse than even and there is nothing in that order that even recognizes that need or provides for it further than a few pious platitudes about how to make worn-out tires last longer.

There are at least four known ways to make synthetic "rubber"—better than the natural product. Beyond a little piffling trifling with those obvious ways out, we let them rot.

We had ample opportunity to lay in an immense war reserve stock. Again we trifled until perhaps that way is closed. It is possible enormously to increase production of rubber from other latex-yielding plants and also by pulping immature trees. We trifled with all that too and, so far as OPM with its tire order is concerned, there is no plan now to do better.

By efficient organization in every community, coupled with vigorous centralized national control on a carefully considered plan, we could still pool our privately-owned motor transport to make every good tire carry its full load. In this way we could temper or even prevent many paralyzing effects of this blind OPM folly on the working people and farmers.

So far as appears, we are neither doing nor planning to do any of these things. We need a "rubber getter."

It is true that artificial "rubber" in the minute quantities yet produced costs several times the old price of East Indian rubber and that factories have taken a long time to build. There is still some debate as to details of other expedients mentioned here. It is time and far past time to resolve all this debate by factual conclusion to go to work after experts have been consulted and agreed so far as possible on the best ways to do the job.

Most authorities believe that in mass production artificial rubber will cost no more than the old product. The time of plant construction has been greatly reduced in this war. Finally, there is no room for a question of price. Price may soon not buy rubber. If we can sacrifice billions and God knows what else beside, we can afford to get vast new sources of rubber almost regardless of cost.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

The Legends of Broadway.
(No. 18—The Stooge.)

IF YOU believe the fable they tell around Lindy's when the hour grows small and the crowds going by outside the window grow thinner and walk faster, the stooge owes his present prominence in show business to three men—Phil Baker, Sid Silvers and Jack Robbins. To Phil, the comedian - accordionist, for being the first to incorporate the stooge as part of his act; to Sid Silvers, the writer-comedian, for taking the first stooge role and building it into an important adjunct of show business; and to Jack Robbins, the music publisher, for—well, let's begin at the beginning.

Kilgallen

Back in the days of ancient history, circa 1922, the music publishers didn't have the powerful medium of radio to make a song overnight, to sell millions of sheet music copies. So their song pluggers haunted off-places — burlesque houses, Tin Pan Alley barber shops where a barber could hum a tune into a bandmaster's ear, beauty parlors where the operators could drop hints about "swell numbers" to stars who dropped in for facials. But most important was backstage at the vaudeville houses.

* * *

Well anyway, Phil Baker at the time this fable begins was set for a two-week booking at the Palace—and he constituted an elegant plug.

Nobody knew this better than Jack Robbins, the music publisher.

Robbins went to Lou Silvers, Al Jolson's conductor and author of "April Showers," who knew Phil Baker well.

"Lou," said Robbins, "I want to do something different for Phil Baker. His accordion can put over two numbers for me. I think I've got a pip of an idea. I'll give him a smart young fellow who'll sit up in a box and heckle him with sock gags. Different, see? But the trouble is, where will I get the smart young fellow?"

"Right under your nose," said Lou. "My little brother, Sid Silvers—the kid you hired last week. He's so good that Jolson himself is using a couple of his gags."

Phil agreed the idea was worth a trial for at least one performance. So Sid Silvers was hired at $50 a week.

It went this way: In the middle of Phil's accordion solo Sid shouted "Bravo!" Phil halted, looked calmly up at the box where his "plant" sat, and answered: "Against the fire rules, bub—I can't do it! But here's an apple"—and he pulled a big one out of his pocket and threw it up at Sid.

This absurdity delighted the audience, and the act (including the Robbins song) was a smash.

At the end of the week Phil and his stooge were the talk of a talkative show business.

Silvers stooged through two years of the show's run with Baker paying him $500 of his $1,800 salary. And the stooge became an accepted part of show business.

BOY WHO KILLED FOUR IN FAMILY ESCAPES JAIL

Flees With Cellmate After Behaving Like Model Prison Inmate.

(By United Press)

LITTLE FALLS, Minn.—Richard Dehler, 16-year-old farm boy who confessed killing four members of his family because he had "to work too much around the farm," was a model prisoner until he slugged a sheriff and broke jail, a deputy sheriff said today.

With Theodore Grest, 41, his cellmate at the Morrison county jail, Dehler escaped a few hours before a psychiatrist was to examine him.

Minnesota police were blocking roads in the northern section of the state where the fugitives were believed headed.

"He was behaving 100 per cent until the break," said Deputy Sheriff Henry Smith. "He was a quiet kind of a kid, but he'd talk about the shooting if we asked him about it. He didn't seem affected much. We didn't know whether he was cold or whether it hadn't soaked in yet."

Dehler was awaiting trial on charges of shooting his father, August, 50, his mother, his sister, Anna Mae, 10, and his brother, Kenneth, 5, Dec. 19. Captured the next day, Dehler told authorities that he placed the bodies in the basement of the home, set fire to the house, and went to a Christmas party.

Smith said Dehler attacked Sheriff William Butcher last night as Butcher was returning him to his cell after permitting him to call his home for clean clothing. Grest stepped out of the cell to slug the sheriff with a blackjack made of a salt shaker and a stocking.

Both ran out of the jail in their shirt sleeves, although the temperature was below zero. They stole an automobile and secured overcoats at a farmhouse.

Smith said Dehler "didn't seem to care to go to the funeral" of his family, and said authorities could not have taken him anyway as "feeling was high here over the shooting."

County Attorney Austin Grimes said the boy's companion in the jail-break had a 20-year prison record. County authorities said they believed the older man planned the escape.

OHIO FINANCIAL POSITION GOOD

Treasury Status, With Eleven Million Surplus, Called Best In Nation.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Ohio entered the new year and the new war period with probably the strongest financial position of any state in the union.

It may be a few days before the treasury's actual status can be determined, but State Finance Director H. D. Defenbacher stuck to his former estimates of an $11,500,000 surplus.

This would permit payment of all outstanding obligations as of Dec. 31 and the $6,000,000 school deficit after allowance for $3,000,000 already appropriated on the deficit for 1942 and to be paid from this year's revenues.

The $6,000,000 cannot be paid from the treasury surplus without legislative action, however. Gov. John W. Bricker is expected to recommend the payment if he calls a special session of the legislature this year; otherwise it will have to wait until the next regular session in 1943.

Several school districts claim the state owes them additional money for payment of maximum subsidiary allowances, but Defenbacher said the claims probably would amount to less than $500,000.

The claims are being considered by the special school survey commission authorized by the last legislature and headed by Rep. Walter Tarr of Cincinnati to study and make recommendations on the entire school system.

Indications are that the treasury surplus will about equal increased sales tax revenues for 1941, approximately $12,000,000 over the 1940 total.

BOMBER WITH 9 ABOARD 'LOST' IN CALIFORNIA MOUNTAIN AREA

(By United Press)

MARCH FIELD, Cal.—A twin-motored bomber missing in the San Bernardino mountain area with nine men aboard was "presumed" lost today.

The ship, a Martin B-26, flew into bad weather with seven other planes on Tuesday night and had been unreported since. March field headquarters revealed last night. Officers said it would be "presumed lost."

A search of the area Wednesday and Thursday failed to disclose any trace of the missing plane. Civilians living in the Cajon pass area assisted army searching crews and were asked, for secrecy's sake, to report directly to the March field command should they discover the ship's fate.

The fourth air force announced that the crew members were:

Second Lieut. Frank A. Kobal, Queens Village, N. Y.; Second Lieut. Joseph B. Maloney, Waterbury, Conn.; Technical Sergeant Waldo C. Jensen, Langley field, Va.; Sergeant Roger F. Organ, Springfield, Ohio, and Privates First Class William R. Chinn, Tronton, Pa.; Vernon H. Englebrecht, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; George G. May, Foxworth, Miss.; Robert N. Mansfield traffic patrolmen have decided at least to "throw a little light" on the accident report system. Policemen investigating traffic accidents from now on will be using the new accident report sheet with handy little lights attached to the top of the report board. Up until now, traffic reports were made on small half-page sheets, the same as any other police case. From now on, drivers will be asked to fill out two pages of information which will be used by the traffic squad in a survey to reduce the number of accidents in the city.

PLAN SETS UP DOUBLING OF EXPENDITURES

Document Prepared By FDR, Director Goes To Printer Today.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The first United States war budget, calling for the greatest spending effort in world annals, went to the printers today.

President Roosevelt and Budget Director Harold D. Smith, after working through the New Year holiday, sent all but a few pages of the history-making document to be set in type. Those final pages were practically done, too, but were held for possible last minute changes.

Contents of the budget were still secret and guarded to prevent premature disclosure before presentation to congress some day next week.

But the president already has hinted publicly at war costs of $50,000,000,000 for the next fiscal year (the 12 months beginning July 1, 1942), indicating a total federal budget of roughly $55,000,000,000 after allowing for non-military activities.

That will approximately double the spending rate of the current fiscal year, already the most expensive in United States history, and dwarf the $18,522,000,000 spent in the most costly year of the World war.

It also will surpass the estimated $30,000,000,000 a year expenditures for war of Germany and the $21,000,000,000 a year of the British empire.

Stacked against revenues, the proposed spending plans call for more than $3 of expenditures for every $1 of taxes. The treasury has estimated that existing taxes will raise about $16,000,000,000 in the coming fiscal year, but is seeking huge new taxes which may alter the fiscal outlook later.

The budget may also mean a $100,000,000,000 national debt in the next fiscal year. The treasury's obligations now are $57,750,000,000, and are expected to come close to the existing $65,000,000,000 statutory debt limit in the next six months.

'New Year Gun' Fatally Wounds Finance Reporter

CINCINNATI—(INS)—A bullet fired from a pistol used to celebrate the advent of the new year a few seconds after midnight yesterday today had claimed the life of William G. Simpson, 27-year-old Dun and Bradstreet reporter.

Police reported that Simpson, who came from Canton, 15 months ago, was shot accidentally by his friend and co-worker, Robert Crissman, 25, who said he believed the gun to be unloaded.

The .45-caliber pistol had been fired three times to herald the new year, then the party went inside. Simpson removed the clip from the weapon, but failed to remove the bullet in the chamber.

Crissman picked up the gun and as a jest pointed it at Simpson. It cracked and Simpson slumped to the floor, fatally wounded.

FLORENCE HOUT WEDS JOHN M'GUGIN, JR.

Ceremony Takes Place on New Year Day In Grace Gospel Church; Rev. H. F. Tropf Reads Marriage Service; Reception Held.

WHEN Miss Florence Hout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hout, 171 Blymyer avenue, became the bride of John McGugin, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McGugin, of Lucas, she was attired in a royal blue velveteen street-length dress made princess style and trimmed in white lace. Her shoes, hat and veil were in a matching shade. She had white gloves and a shoulder corsage of red roses. Rev. H. F. Tropf performed the ceremony at 11 o'clock Thursday morning before the altar of the Grace Gospel church. Palms, ferns, baskets of gladioli, and two seven-branch candelabra formed an attractive setting for the wedding.

A short program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Elva Hout, organist, and Miss Ruth Tropf, soloist. "At Dawning," by Cadman, "Savior Like a Shepherd Lead Us," and the Lohengrin "Bridal Chorus" by Wagner, were played by Mrs. Hout. Miss Tropf sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Mrs. Alfred Hahn, was matron of honor. She was wearing a wine velveteen street-length dress made princess style and trimmed with white lace. Her accessories were in a matching shade. Talisman roses formed her shoulder corsage. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Hout chose a black chiffon velvet dress trimmed with sequins. Her accessories were black and white and she had a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. McGugin, mother of the bridegroom, wore a black crepe dress trimmed in teal blue, black accessories and a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Guests were shown to their places in the church by Virgil Bisel and Richard Robison, brothers-in-law of the bride. Harold McGugin, of Lucas, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Reception for the immediate families was held at the home of the bride's parents immediately after the ceremony. Color scheme was pink and white for the bride's table which was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. McGugin donned a printed silk jersey dress and black accessories when she and Mr. McGugin left on a wedding trip through southern Ohio. After Jan. 5, they will make their home in Lucas

The bride was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and from Mansfield Business college She has been employed in the office of the Central Fruit company. Mr McGugin was graduated from Lucas schools and is an employe of the Tappan Stove company.

Fashion, Styled by the OPM

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Fashion Editor

Get a grip on yourself and stop singing those OPM Blues.

You needen't be frightened by that Big Bad Wolf "priority."

Even if you can't have silk stockings or zippers or imported linen handkerchiefs any more, you're going to look just as beautiful as ever.

Your Uncle Sam is a wise old man, and he realizes that feminine fashions play a large part in morale.

Your favorite uncle is asking you to change a good many of your buying habits, your fashions and even your way of life. The brass and chromium that went into last year's costume jewelry will go this year into guns and tanks and planes. Your 1942 spring dress will be zipperless, and you may be asked to wear your hair short to save hairpins.

But for every non-essential gadget the OPM takes away from you, there's going to be a good substitute.

To help quiet the panic of girls who can't imagine life without silk, linen, metal bangles and zippers, I got together the costume picture here, observing all priorities, but with no shortage of style.

The dress is the kind you'll be seeing soon on our best-dressed young women — of light-weight navy blue wool crepe because the government says, there is as yet no shortage of wool. The wrap-around coat style is flattering yet innocent of any metal fasteners.

Because there is a shortage of fur felt, you'll see more and more smart little hats like the one worn by our Miss Priorities, of navy blue rayon belting ribbon.

The army needs leather for shoes, so women's shoes will use more and more fabric tops. Fabric handbags and gloves may be the rule of the future.

When the present silk stocking supply is exhausted, there won't be any more. But as long as we have coal, air and water, we'll have nylon, just as flattering and far more durable. The new nylon stockings will have cotton or rayo tops and feet, but that, again, is no unbearable hardship.

Hat of rayon belting ribbon.
Short hairdo — no hairpins.
Ceramic lapel pins —no metal.
Wool crepe dress with rayon belting ribbon trim.
Wraparound style with tied fastening — no zippers.
Transparent plastic bracelet.
Cotton gloves.
Rayon faille handbag with plastic clasp.
Nylon stockings.
Cabardine shoes, using less leather.

Mrs. Roger Gray will give a book review at the meeting of the Co-Operette club to be held on Jan. 15, according to the club program for the year. Answer to roll call will be given by each member telling about her favorite current reading.

Basinger, Mrs. Gordon Schwan, Mrs. T A Coleman, Mrs. Earl J. Culp and Mrs. A. Tootikian Current Plays will be discussed at the regular meeting of the club to be held March 19th. Mrs. H L. Creveling will lead the discussion. Hostess will be Mrs. G F. Van Tilburg.

Treating Youths Like Grown-Ups

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Adults like to be considered younger physically than they really are while they, as well as children, resent any suggestion that they are younger mentally.

Referring to her teachers, a certain high school girl said: "They treat us like second-graders and expect us to answer them like college women." A girl in college once asked me: "Why do teachers treat you like a kindergarten child?" "Do they?" I inquired. "Yes, and they also did in high school."

Youths would like to be treated at school and at home about as if they were adults. Barring a few instances in which their parents, and teachers with far more experience, will properly make a few decisions for them, I see no good reason why their desire to be treated as grown up should not be realized. Teachers and parents who do this readily win their co-operation.

I have come to believe that the biggest secret of succeeding with the adolescent boy and girl is contained in this attitude toward him. It certainly is an effective means of winning their confidence.

During recent years, I have conducted forums and conferences with high school and college students throughout the United States, in groups of from 25 to 2500. Usually I discuss with them their feelings of self-consciousness when they talk in class or before a larger group. Always I talk to them as if they were persons of maturity. I prove to them I won't make fun of them or treat them as little children. Very soon they treat on another as adults and no one laughs at the remarks of anybody else.

Don't humiliate Adolescent.

Did it ever occur to you that we are more likely to make fun of another person, laugh at him, when we suppose he has said or done something less bright than we should expect from one his age? More often, our ridicule of another person is an unconscious effort of ours to announce how much brighter we suppose we are than he is.

Unawares, we all strive to feel important. The easiest way to get this feeling is by lording it over other persons, and the easiest persons to lord it over are children, especially adolescent children.

Yet we parents and teachers don't lord it over our children on purpose. We just do it, usually entirely unawares. Mother Nature prompts us. Now since we know how prone we are to transgress against the innocent child, we should be on guard. These human ills of ours I discuss more fully in my "The Modern Parent" and my "Building Personality in Children," both of which you may find in your public library.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Noel set his lips stubbornly, then opened them for a question distinctly frigid.

"Is it permitted to ask why you feel that I should listen to something which is most distasteful to me?"

"There would be no use telling you why now, Noel," I said crisply. "Later, when I explain my mission to you, I am sure you will realize why I have to explain these things about Mary. But now I am afraid you will have to accept my story as I tell it, or else refuse to listen to me at all."

Admits His Wrong.

"You know I never would do that," Noel said, reproachfully. "And I will make no more objections."

"Thank you," I said.

"I imagine," I said, "that if you search your own soul, you will realize why Mary first began going out with Redfield. Do you remember? Mary did not tell me her reason in so many words. I have just gleaned it from chance references. But I am sure you must know the answer."

"You know I do," he said quickly. "We talked of this before. I acknowledge freely that I gave her reason enough for going out with Redfield or anybody else—doing anything that would teach me a lesson.

"As I told you, being 'Mary Veritzen's husband' was getting me down so that I was hardly responsible for what I did. But she wasn't to blame for that, and I know that for a while I made a perfect hell of her life.

"If it had been anybody else than Redfield," he broke out stormily. "I could have taken it, I think. But he was the one chiefly responsible for the slurs about my being only Mary's husband, worth nothing by myself, and it simply killed me to think that she would tolerate him, let alone make an intimate companion of him."

"To do Mary justice, Noel," I said judicially, "I do not think she knew Redfield was responsible for those slurs. Indeed, I do not think that she knows anything about them even now."

"Like ——" he exclaimed fiercely; broke off the objuration as though he had bitten it.

Tells Mary's Reason.

"But that is really aside from the question," I said firmly. "What I want to explain to you is this—

"Mary may have begun going out with Redfield in a spirit of retaliation against you. Remember, I do not know this from Mary; I only surmise it. What I do know from her own lips is that Redfield's flamboyance and conceit soon began to bore her, and she was about to stop going out with him when he let something fall which aroused her suspicion that he was disloyal to the government. Then she staged a deliberate campaign to find out what his activities and connections were."

Important Discoveries.

"I do not suppose you are placing much credence in this," I said stiffly, "but I must ask you to give it a fair hearing, nevertheless."

"I am trying," he said simply, and I went swiftly on with my story, outlining in detail all of the astounding things which Mary had told me about Redfield, also the revelations concerning him which Nancy Carew had made to me and to my father.

"My father is tremendously impressed with what Mary has done," I finished. "He considers what she already has discovered, although much still remains to be found out, as of the utmost importance."

"I suppose," Noel said, measuring his words icily, "that he wants her to go on with her voyage of discovery."

Girl's Parents Turn Against Her Friend

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 30 years of age, have my own business, an automobile of sorts, but very little cash. I'm deeply in love with a girl who is about 25 and of a good family. I've known her family for three years, and they've always treated me so well that I thought they liked me. I've often taken them all to the movies or for a ride.

Lately they've been acting rather strange, they don't want the girl to see me. They've just recently become acquainted with a certain professional man, and are anxious that their daughter fall in love with him. I know that the girl loves me just the same, and I love her and will do anything to win her. Please tell me how to handle this. "R."

If the girl loves you, that's more than half the battle, isn't it? And the parents will have a hard time marrying the young lady to anybody, especially as she loves you. But like most parents, they think a marriage of the professional type is desirable for their daughter.

My advice would be that you continue to be agreeable to the girl's parents, and bide your time. They'll soon find that you are the one they want for a son-in-law.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man sometime ago, who had been running around with a rather questionable crowd, who sometimes influenced him to drink too much. I gave him to understand that I was opposed to anything like that, and would go with him provided he gave up this particular group of friends. He promised me faithfully he would close that chapter, and we went together for a year and planned to be married next spring. I was to get my diamond ring for a Christmas present.

A month before Christmas I heard he had been present at a party given by one of the girls in his old crowd, and as usual had taken too much to drink. I was so upset about it that I told him my love for him had died and we broke up. But a couple of weeks later I telephoned him that I had forgiven him, and it seemed to please him very much. I haven't heard or seen him since then. Please advise me how I can get him back, because I can't forget him. L. D S.

You'll have to admit that you were just a bit high-handed with this young man. After all, I wonder if you have enough interests in common. Think about that very seriously. Begin with the wild parties—he likes them, you do not. What are some other things he likes and you don't, or that you like and which bore him? It would hardly seem worth while to try to win this young man back if you have no interests in common.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a man of 35 years, have a bachelor's apartment near a large church. I heard such beautiful music being played there that I decided to attend, and became so interested that I've been going for the last year. That's how I happened to see her.

She's very beautiful and comes to church almost every Sunday, and although I haven't been introduced to her, I found out her name. I wait in the vestibule for her to enter and while she doesn't exactly smile at me, she looks with kindly interest and sometimes exchanges glances with me during the service.

I don't know anyone in the church, and neither does she, as far as I can see, but I'm mad over her and think some of my love is returned. Why should I stop for conventions? Why shouldn't I, some Sunday morning, go up and speak to her? But then, what if she turns me down? Jim K.

Why have you waited so long? As soon as you found out her name, you should have called on the pastor or one of the assistants, and put up the question of introduction. Of course, these days churches recognize social obligations, and are only too delighted to help play the part of Cupid. Don't waste another moment in worshipping from afar. Call on the clergyman tomorrow and see if you can't make arrangements to take her to church yourself next Sunday.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHY DON'T YOU COUNT?

It is so easy to count up to thirteen, and the fate of so many bridge hands depends upon just that simple mathematics, that it is surprising that so many players neglect so often to employ it. The magic number of somebody else's suit, in figuring the total number of tricks probable by means of cross-ruffing, and in many other ways. And sometimes a smaller number is important, especially if it is a number you can increase by one in your side's favor, or decrease it by one if it is a number to the advantage of the opponents.

	♠ None ♥ K Q J 10 2 ♦ K J 9 6 ♣ J 9 5 4

	♠ Q 8 7 6 3 2 ♥ A 9 7 6 5 ♦ None ♣ 8 7

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♦	2 ♥
3 ♣	4 ♥	Pass	Pass
5 ♣	5 ♥	Dbl

What a shame it was to see East give this contract to North, by violating one of the simplest rules for defensive play. After raking in the club K and Q, he followed with his A, and the declarer proceeded to make his contract by means of a cross-ruff.

Trumping that with the heart A, he ruffed a spade with the heart 3, a diamond with the heart 5, a second spade with the heart 10, a second diamond with the heart 6, a third spade with the heart J, a third diamond with the heart 7, setting up the diamond K, and then led to the heart K and Q, finishing with the set-up diamond Q and club J.

East should have counted. Since his partner made a free bid of diamonds over South's 1-Spade on the first round, though lacking the A and K, he very likely had six of the suit, so that North has four and hence should be blank in spades. If so, North would have five hearts. Thus ten tricks should be makable by a cross-ruff unless stopped by a trump lead. Had East led his heart 3, instead of the club A, which set up North's clearly-marked club J, North could have taken only nine tricks with his ten trumps, plus one for the diamond K, which would set up after three ruffs. But East was not in a counting mood.

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, Jan. 3.

An interesting and eventful day, judging by the very intriguing aspects of leading planets. There is likely to be a sudden and peculiar development, with strange, irregular and unpredictable situations, probably arising from unfathomable and surprising sources. With all this tone of mystery and surprise, there is a groundwork of stability and security, although this may involve definite change of place, plans and contacts. Elders seem to figure as well as strangers. The emotions, ideals and aspirations are involved, as well as stern mentality.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of intriguing and baffling experiences, with an air of the vague and intangible, the strange and peculiar. But there will also be sound and solid factors for success and security, with elders as well as strange elements furthering the objectives. Hard work with sound returns may be supplemented by intuitive, inspirational or even psychic stimuli. There will be change, happiness and surprises.

A child born on this day will have many practical virtues as well as unusual creative talents, inspired by ideals, intuitions and vivid imagination. It will be successful and happy and have strange adventures.

'TOAST STACK'

Try a "toast stack" when breakfast interest lags. You can then quickly get a lot of nutriment into a small space. Stack up four slices of hot, buttered toast with fillings between, of jam or jelly, honey and brown sugar with cinnamon. Top with three slices broiled bacon and cut the stack in three slices, giving a piece of bacon to each slice.

Sport Podge

"Last year," says Vern Hoffman, coach of the Mansfield high cagers, "every team we played with the exception of Canton McKinley used a zone defense.

"This year just about every team we play is using a man-for-man defense. And our schedule this year isn't so much different that new teams are making the difference.

"It's just that the tide this year in Ohio basketball is ebbing or flowing, as you please, back to the man-for-man style of defense.

"There's only one season for this overnight change in defensive styles of play that I can see, and that's a case of follow-the-leader, or go-sheepie-go.

"Two years ago a zone defense won for the Ohio state tournament champions. Last year it was a man-for-man.

"It appears Ohio high school coaches take their cue from the state tourney. It'll be a short cue this year, but a heavy one, with only four teams going to the tournament."

And what kind of a defense is Hoffman using? A shifting MAN-FOR-MAN. But really the word SHIFTING should have been in caps. When the opposing offense is right, it can look as much like a zone defense as Mr. Zone himself.

"Of the first six teams we played this season," Mr. Hoffman is talking again, "only Elyria used an out-and-out zone defense. Collinwood used a semi-zone. Columbus South, Findlay, Newark and Canton McKinley used a man-for-man. And I understand that Akron West will use a man-for-man tonight.

"Our man-for-man has been a bit misleading since we've used Winbigler at forward on offense and at guard on defense, but I don't think we'll fool 'em that way any more," Hoffman concluded. "I've decided we need him out in the front line of defense more than under the bucket"

This swing back and forth between the two defensive systems has been going on for years and years and probably will go on for years and years, so if you are looking for things to erase from your worries for 1942 this is a good place to start.

Usually the coaches who fit their systems of play, on offense and defense to the type and ability of their players are better off in the long run. And that's what Hoffman has been trying to do with the Tygers.

* * *

And I maintain that the best zone defense is the NO PARKING ZONE defense. Look what it did to the game when they put up that sign in the foul circle.

Toledoans Scalp Dartmouth Indians

TOLEDO —(AP)— The scalps of the Dartmouth Indians hung from the belts of the Toledo University basketball Rockets today, completing a sweep of three of the east's leading squads.

With center Bob Gerber tallying 28 points, the Rockets beat Dartmouth, 59 to 46, last night. Earlier in the holiday season, Toledo trimmed Yale and Cornell.

The Dartmouth victory stretched undefeated Toledo's victory string to eight.

Treat for Grid Fans Scheduled

Brown Talks Football In Banquet Speeches.

MANSFIELD football fans have a treat in store for them Monday night at The News-Journal annual football banquet when they hear Coach Paul Brown discuss his first season as mentor of the Ohio State Buckeyes.

Unlike many big-time coaches making the winter knife-and-fork league circuit, Brown doesn't stick to the time-honored formula of character building, sportsmanship, losing gracefully, and the general soft-soap routine mixed with a cheerful or tearful little anecdote about a star or two.

* * *

All of which items may be entirely all right in their way, but they are subjects which have been discussed often enough to be taken for granted, and they're not the things which football fans want to hear from big-time foot ball coaches.

What they do want to hear is the subject on which Brown talks, football. The Buckeye mentor candidly discusses the Ohio State season of last fall, bringing out the mistakes and failures as well as the successes of the team and the coaching staff, and giving credit where credit is due.

Since his first talk at Ashland after Ohio State's surprising 20-20 tie with Michigan, Brown has stuck to that form of banquet speech, and has increased his already secure popularity with fans throughout the state.

The Ohio State coach will bring movies of the Buckeye games of the past season, particularly the pictures of the Michigan game, which will round out a big evening of football films for Mansfield fans.

Pictures of other big college games of 1941 will be shown, and in addition Coach Bud Houghton of Massillon high school will show movies of the 6 to 6 tie between Mansfield and Massillon.

Luther Emory, football writer of the Massillon Independent, who will also be a guest at the banquet, reports that the movies of the Mansfield game are unusually good for a night game.

"They show what a really great defensive game Joe Romano and Bill Doolittle played for Mansfield that night," Emory declares.

The Downtown Coaches association will have an important part in the banquet proceedings, and the program is expected to move along in rapid-fire order under the experienced hand of Toastmaster Gil Baird, Westinghouse sales promotion manager.

Usual procedure in the past has been a deadline on ticket sale a few hours before the dinner. However it appears that this will not be necessary this year. Tickets have been going rapidly and it appears now that they'll be sold out before any such deadline could be reached.

The few remaining tickets may be obtained at The News-Journal office at $1.55 each, which includes only the cost of the dinner plus tax. The dinner will be served at the Mansfield-Leland hotel at 6:30.

Bucks Return From Coast

Coach Not Discouraged Over Poor Showing.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State university's squad, returned from a disastrous trip to the west coast, scheduled two practice sessions today to whip into shape for its Western conference opener against Minnesota here Saturday.

Coach Harold G. Olsen was not discouraged by the Bucks' losses to Creighton, California and Stanford.

"There's no getting away from the fact that we met good opponents," he said. "We took advantage of the trip to give several of our boys experience that will come in handy during the Western conference season."

* * *

Surprise package of the journey was Sophomore Jimmy Sims, who scored 14 joints against Stanford. Minnesota, Iowa at Michigan and Chicago at Purdue

PORTERVILLE NIMROD CLAIMS COUNTY TITLE

M'CONNELSVILLE —(AP)— J. T. Maris of Porterville proclaimed himself today as Morgan county's mightiest hunter despite his 80 years.

His bag for the season just concluded was 50 rabbits, 14 pheasants and 13 squirrels.

"I can wear out any young man in a tramp across the hills," he said.

COLUMBUS BOXING FANS REFUNDED ADMISSIONS

COLUMBUS — (AP) — About 1,000 boxing fans received an unexpected free view of three bouts last night and Billy Nichy of Buffalo, N. Y., drew a suspension by the Columbus Boxing commission for refusing to fight Heavyweight Buddy Walker for a share of the small receipts.

Promoter Whitey Morrett refunded admissions after three preliminary bouts, reporting that Nichy refused to enter the ring for an agreed 20 per cent of the gross or Morrett's later offer of $200. The crowd had paid in only $600.

Tygers Resume Action Tonight

Meet Akron West Quint In Home Bucket Tilt.

The holiday lull in Mansfield sports comes to an end tonight at the high school gym were the Tyger cagers resume their basketball wars, meeting Akron West, a perennial court rival.

Given a rest yesterday after three days of intensive practice the Tygers are expected to be fresh, and, so Coach Vern Hoffman hopes, in shooting mood.

Only in the past three games have the Mansfield tossers been hitting the hoop in the manner to which Hoffman had expected them to become accustomed.

As a result the Tygers dropped their first three games to Columbus South, Findlay and Newark. They've defeated Elyria and Collinwood, and lost a close game at Canton McKinley in the last three starts.

* * *

Probable starting lineup for the Tygers tonight will be Dietzel at center, Winbigler and Hahn at forwards, and Shiplet and Robinson at guards.

Officials will be Harold Anderson and Charley Cupp, both of Toledo University.

In the preliminary game at 7 o'clock the high school reserves will meet Ontario of the Richland county league. The big game is scheduled at 8:15.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—Duke saved the Rose Bowl game for this year but the move to Durham may hurt the Pasadena show in the long run . . . Looks like a cinch that the folks in the Carolinas will try to make a permanent fixture of a New Year's Day game, and if they can arrange a hookup with the Southern conference, that will eliminate a possible California visitor each year . . . All that noise you heard over the air really was the fans cheering, not the boys who gave 14 points on Duke moaning about it . . . Lon Stiner was complaining because Oregon State ran into wet weather before leaving the coast but apparently that was just what the Beavers needed so they could handle a slippery ball.

Can't decide whether the No. 2 surprise was the way Georgia wrecked T. C. U. or Fordham Jim Crowley's stunt of springing a "T" formation on Missouri . . . Most of Fordham's good gains came on quick opening plays that were supposed to be a Tiger specialty.

MORE BOWL BITS

Second guessing at long range, it seems that Duke's workouts against George McAfee weren't enough to get ready for Don Durdan, the Oregon southpaw pitcher . . . and T. C. U. apparently had heard all about Frankie Sinkwich's running but didn't know he could pass, too . . . Miami reports Frankie showed just one sign of slowing up before the game.

* * *

That was when Simone Simon, the movie eyeful, visited the practice field and the photogs wanted her to kiss Sinkwich. It took considerable coaxing to get the Croatian Cracker to go for that one . . . Radio announcers had their usual trouble not saying anything about the weather, but they managed to say something every time a new ball was brought into play.

* * *

Best line we heard when Bill Stern said an Oregon State penalty was for "clipping, illegal use of the hands and unnecessary roughness."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Mike Jacobs won't even talk about a sellout for the Baer-Louis fight because he still has a lot of tickets left and doesn't want to scare off any customers, but he figures that there won't be many vacant seats if they keep selling at the current rate . . . Stanford's Frankie Albert has been signed to do a movie, "The Spirit of Stanford" for Columbia Pix.

GALION BOOKED TO MEET YELLOW JACKETS

GALION — Galion high school basketball teams will be host tonight to Mt. Vernon cagers on the Junior high court.

Traveling to Norwalk Tuesday evening, the Galion varsity team trailed at the end of every period of a game and lost to the Norwalk quintet, 38-28. The Junior varsity team won from the Norwalk reserves, 24-14.

Durdan Scores as Beavers Beat Blue Devils

The standout star of the transplanted Rose Bowl game in Durham, N. C., Halfback Don Durdan of Oregon State, dashes across the Duke university goal line, above, for the first score of the game, in which the Beavers upset the favored Duke Blue Devils, 20 to 16. Barnett (16) and Prothro (53) of Duke tried in vain to nab him before he hit pay dirt.

Blumenstock Gains for Rams In Sugar Bowl

Jim Blumenstock, No. 44, of Fordham, races around right end for an 11-yard gain, above, in the first quarter of the Sugar Bowl contest between the Rams and the University of Missouri. Fordham won on a blocked punt, 2 to 0.

Pro Cage Tilt Pits Toledo, Detroit In Mansfield Gym

THE Toledo Jim White basketball team which is slated to battle the world champion Detroit Eagles in Mansfield High school gym, Tuesday at 9 p. m., in no way resembles the Toledo quintet which Chuck Chuckovits has brought to Mansfield several times in recent years. In fact, Chuckovits is the only member of that entertaining team who will even be in action against Detroit.

The Toledoans joined the National Pro league this season. The league schedule is long and tough. It was found necessary to drop the local boys, most of whom were in defense work or the army, and hire out-and-out professionals. Chuckovits, the highest paid player in pro ball today, gave up his teaching work to become a full fledged pro.

From Oshkosh the Jim Whites purchased "Scoop" Putnam, the former Tennessee university All-American and George Nelmark, brilliant Missouri State Teachers college star. Eddie Erban, an old Marquette U. favorite, playing his first year in the "play for pay" ranks, was signed the day before the loop schedule got underway.

* * *

From Notre Dame university came Tommy Wukovits, the Irish captain of two years ago. Soup Cable of Akron Firestone fame, Bill Thompson, former Toledo De-Sales all-time great, and Jim Rae of Michigan U are other stars helping to establish the Jim Whites in national cage circles. All of the Jim White regulars are expected to be here except Jim Rae, who is taking a pre-medic course at Michigan and plays week-ends only.

* * *

Chuckovits is leading the National Pro league scoring race with an average of better than 18 points. Critics agree he is a cinch to break the loop season scoring mark by over a hundred points. Chuck himself admits he is shooting more spectacularly than any time in his career.

For those who like individual skill and clowning on the hardwood, the Jim Whites offer George "Scat" Nelmark, one of the nation's greatest dribblers.

Wilton "Scoop" Putnam gives the Jim Whites an accurate long shot, something they have needed for a long time to open the opposition defense so that the ball can be worked in to Chuckovits. Cable, Erban and Thompson furnish the needed heighth so essential in big time basketball. Tommy Wukovits is the spark plug who keeps the club moving.

* * *

The spectacle of Chuckovits working with nationally famous players against the recognized World Champions, will provide a big city attraction. The teams are being brought to Mansfield by the City "A" league, which has furnished fans of Mansfield and vicinity with other pro games the past three or four years.

An interesting preliminary to start at 8 o'clock will find the Mansfield Westinghouse quintet entertaining the Lima Westinghouse representatives. The gates will open promptly at 6:30.

Ashland Favored Over Whippets

SHELBY—Shelby Whippets travel to Ashland tonight for a North Central Ohio league cage game. The Whippets earlier this week defeated the Alumni, 32 to 24.

Ashland is undefeated so far this season and is favored over the weak Whippet five.

Coach William Query believes he has a new find in Ralph Higgins, reserve forward from last year. Higgins has been moved up to the first string to replace Dave Clark, who has been jumping center.

Shelby has lost three games out of four so far. Possibilities for the team this winter are the best of any in recent years but the team has not been clicking as yet.

Regular practice drills have been held by the Shelby players during the holiday season. After school drills will be resumed next Monday when the schools open following the annual two-week Christmas vacation.

Oregon State Upsets Duke In Rose Bowl

Fordham, Georgia, Alabama Also Win In New Year Grid Tangles

DURHAM, N. C.—(AP)—They laughed when Coach Lon Stiner of Oregon State sat down hard on the football dopesters because they had "underrated my team." But when Lon's boys started to play, folks, the laughter changed to amazement.

Lon proved convincingly yesterday in the Rose Bowl game here that his Beavers, who entered the contest on the short end of 3 to 1 odds, were the most underrated individuals since David slung his sling. The youthful coach maneuvered his team to a 20 to 16 triumph over a Duke club which had gone through a nine-game season without a defeat, a tie, or a close call.

Thus ended what probably will go into the record books as one of the most unusual games in the Rose Bowl saga. Duke made 15 first downs to 14 for the visitors. But the Beavers were out front most of the way, and Duke never forged into the lead.

The first payoff was a 15-yard romp by left-handed Don Durdan, the Mr. Dependable of the westerners' squad. Duke knotted the count in the second stanza, on a four-yard reverse by the brilliant Steve Lach.

Then came the third quarter, and one of the wildest chapters in the history of Dixie football. Oregon State went into the lead when Bob Dethman shot a beautiful 31-yard touchdown pass to George Zellick. Simas' kick was good.

Winston Siegfried scored for Duke from the one-yard line, in a touchdown set up by a great run by Lach and a penalty against the westerners for unnecessary roughness. Tom Prothro's kick tied the score again. But Oregon State again took the lead, this time on a 68-yard pass and run play from Dethman to Gene Gray.

In the last quarter, Duke scored a safety, when Durdan, standing in his end zone, got a bad pass from center.

There were no alibis from Coach Wallace Wade. "We lost to a mighty fine fall club," said the Duke mentor.

Everywhere but at New Orleans, where Fordham slogged to a 2 to 0 triumph over Missouri, touchdowns were as numerous as New Year day headaches.

At Miami Georgia and Texas Christian players popped over the goal line with all the regularity of habit ruining the best of resolutions as the Bulldogs of the Southeast conference triumphed, 40 to 26.

And Alabama crossed the double stripe four times and Texas A. & M. three times in the Crimson Tide's 29 to 21 Cotton Bowl victory.

The Fordham-Missouri score wasn't a surprise. It was a compliment to the two teams who were forced to play on a field that resembled a Louisiana bayou. Fordham's two points came early in the first period when Don Greenwood, Missouri end, dropped back to punt and the water-logged boot was blocked by Tackle Alex Santilli of the Rams. The ball squirted through the end zone before Stan Ritinski, Fordham flanker, got control of it.

That was all the scoring the 73,000 spectators saw.

Alabama used the minimum of effort in turning back the Cadets of Texas A. & M., collecting its four touchdowns while gaining only 75 yards by rushing and passing while registering but a lone first down. The Texans, who could get only three touchdowns, gained 309 yards and 13 first downs.

* * *

The Tide's success was a tribute to Jimmy Nelson, their ace back, who scampered 72 yards on a punt return and later registered from 21 yards out.

Frank Sinkwich, the broken-jawed all-American fullback, was the difference between Georgia and Texas Christian, the latter eleven dropping its first bowl decision in four outings.

Three times Sinkwich flipped scoring aerials and once he broke loose on a 43-yard touchdown jaunt of his own. He and his mates combined for a 40 to 7 lead before the Texans realized the game was under way.

On the other bowl fronts, Tulsa's Missouri Valley champions lasted for a fourth period touchdown and a 6 to 0 verdict over Texas Tech in the Sun Bowl; Langston, Okla., blanked Morris Brown, 13 to 0, in the Vulcan Bowl for the colored championship and Louisiana college bested the University of Mexico, 10 to 0, in Mexico City for the Orchid Bowl crown.

CHAPTER XXXII

"You're looking fine!" Carol assured him. "Are you sure you didn't get too tired?"

"Oh, no. Sit down and talk for a minute."

She drew a chair close to the bed. "I'm so glad. We've made very good time today, considering you had a green chauffeur. Mr. Martin tells me that it's very level from here on and we can get to the Springs by three o'clock tomorrow afternoon without hurrying . . . that is, if you'll get up in time." She laughed, "I think I will stop at this place on my way back. They're such pleasant people."

Charlie seemed suddenly worried.

"Are you going to leave me right off?" he asked.

"Oh, I'll wait and see that you're comfortably settled and like it," Carol smiled reassuringly. "I'm in no great rush."

"Gee, it was swell of you, Carol, to bring me down here! I . . . I think I want to tell you something."

"All right. If it isn't a long story. I want you to get to sleep early. Your mother told you that you were to mind me, you know."

"It's about Wige," Charlie said, frowning Carol tried to make her face and voice devoid of any telltale expression.

"What about . . . him?"

"Why, we were talking about me one night not long ago. I was wishing he didn't have to work so hard because I almost never see him any more. He said he was trying to get ahead as fast as he could and make lots of money."

"Isn't that all right?"

"Oh, yes. But I knew that wasn't all the reason," Charlie said. "He wants to make money because you've got lots now. He thinks he can't go to see you any more like he used to."

"Charlie . . . no! You don't know what you're talking about. Wige and I are just friends, the same as we always have been. You're wrong."

"I'm not wrong!" the boy insisted stubbornly. "Wige tried to laugh it off, too. He said he was saving his money as fast as he could to send me down to the Springs himself. But I knew it wasn't right. That's why I told him I wouldn't go . . . I mean I wouldn't let him spend his money. You see, if it didn't help me it would be wasted. He's always been so good to me that I wanted him to be happy first. He's been so different lately. He isn't happy. I know why and I think Mom does. He's thinking of you all the time."

"You've got it all mixed up, dear."

"No I haven't got it mixed up! I can tell. But I can't understand why he let you spend your money one me. I'll bet it's going to take an awful lot. Is it?"

"Of course it isn't. And everything's all right. Let's don't talk about it any more now . . . please. There's a good boy."

"All right. But, Carol—"

"Yes?" She had risen to her feet determined to end the interview.

"I love you more than anybody . . . next to Wige and Mom."

"That's sweet of you, Chuckie." Almost unconsciously she used the nickname, even as she bent over and kissed him lightly on the cheek. "I love you, too . . . but you mustn't tell anybody. And I'm turning out your light."

"Carol?"

"Yes?"

"You . . . like Wige, don't you?"

"Of course. Good night."

A little later as she sat on the side of the bed giving her hair its nightly brushing, Amanda Lennon's words came back to her. "He's eating his heart out, Carol. For you." She was so physically and mentally weary that the memory caused her to utter an hysterical little laugh.

Just about now, Wige Lennon more than likely was wishing he might wring her neck.

"Where's Chuckie?" Wilbur Lennon repeated when his mother neither looked up from her cooking nor answered him.

"He's gone," she admitted in a strained voice.

"Gone! What do you mean? Where did he go?"

Amanda wiped her hands nervously on her apron and indicated a chair at the end of the table.

"You sit there, Wilbur, and I'll tell you everything. Charlie is all right."

"I don't want to sit down!" was the impatient retort. "What..."

"I said sit down!" Amanda ordered. Wige obeyed, staring at the little woman as though he thought she suddenly had become demented and that it would be safest to humor her. She leaned against the table for support, her hands clenched tightly.

"Charlie's gone to Siloam Springs, Wilbur."

His face went white, an angry gleam came into his dark eyes.

"Who took him?"

"Carol."

"And you let her?"

"Yes, I let her! I'm not too proud to let a few dollars stand in the way of Charlie's getting well. You were. But he's only your brother. I went through the pain of having him. You didn't. And I been through the pain of seeing him waste away, and my prayers doing no good . . . till now." She paused, almost breathlessly from her outburst. "You can't blame your mother, Wilbur," she went on beseechingly. "You ought to thank God that Carol wanted to help and could. We can pay the money back some day. You know we can. She's such a good girl!"

Wige slowly relaxed in his chair. He placed an elbow on the table, rested his head against the palm of his hand. His face was lowered so that Amanda could not see his expression.

"They weren't going to try to get there by tonight, were they?" he asked in a dull voice.

"No. Carol said she'd stop over some place, get to the Springs tomorrow."

"She isn't used to driving."

"But you're not afraid she'll have any trouble?" Amanda's earlier fears returned.

"No."

"And you don't . . . you don't mind, Wilbur?" He laughed bitterly, then said:

"What good would it do? What good does anything do? I've lost the only things I wanted. That's something you don't know, either." His head sank lower.

One of Amanda's thin hands touched his dark hair gently. The gesture of affection was so unusual that she spoke self-consciously.

"I guess I understand the two things you're thinking about," she observed with rare discernment. "But you've always been a good boy and a good son to me. That counts. Everything will be all right. Go in and sit down at the other table. I'll fetch you your supper."

"I don't want any. I'm going out. Just for a little while."

The night was a sleepless one for Wige. The knowledge that the small room next to his was empty brought an almost unendurable feeling of depression and responsibility. It would help some if he knew where Chuckie was spending the night, if there were someone to do the things for him that Carol couldn't. She could be trusted to make the right arrangements, but, for some reason, he tried to keep his mind from dwelling upon Carol.

That brought only helpless confusion. It would be bad enough when she came home to report. He would have to face her, thank her, go through some form of insisting upon arranging a repayment. All as humiliating as though she were a stranger and not—not Carol. It was something to shut out of his mind for the present, if possible.

The next morning at the office matters were even worse, he couldn't get his mind on his work although he plunged into it in a species of desperation. Dennison elected to spend the afternoon at his desk. The boss seemed unusually preoccupied, too.

Wige found himself growing more certain that Dennison was upset about something. Was he worrying over the same thing his assistant was. Only it would be Carol. Wige was miserably aware of Dennison's frequent calls at the Steel home. He had been obliged to suffer clumsy jibes from his friends to the effect that he was being "cut out." For all Wige knew, it might be true.

Dennison could be afraid that the drive to Siloam Springs would prove too great a tax upon Carol's limited experience. Bunk! He told himself. Carol wouldn't have mentioned the Springs without confiding her errand there. If she had done that, Dennison would have been pretty sure to say something to Wige, particularly if he didn't like the idea. The latter almost wished that he would, in that case. It would ease the tension. For once, he wouldn't mind talking back.

Shortly after three the phone on Wige's desk rang and he picked up the instrument perfunctorily.

"Hello. This is Lawhead Corporation." he said. Something in his brain seemed to snap when a woman's voice said cheerfully:

"Long distance. Siloam Springs calling for Mr. Wilbur Lennon. Is he there?"

"Yes," Wige said thickly.

"Put him on, please. There's your party, Siloam. Go ahead."

In the instant's delay that followed, Wige glanced instinctively at Dennison. Chester had swung his chair about and his gray eyes were watching intently. But someone was speaking over the wire now.

"What's that?" Dennison heard Wige ask sharply. He saw his assistant's face whiten. Then: "Yes, I can hear you. I understand. I'm his brother . . . you're sure? Oh. She was? . . . Badly . . . I see . . . Yes, of course. I'll attend to that." Long and exasperating pauses between the dull expressions. Dennison left his chair and came over to the other desk, tapped impatiently on its surface with his fingers. "But you're sure he's all right? . . . Yes, I will . . . As quickly as I can . . . Tell him so. Thank you very much for calling me. Goodbye."

The telephone slipped from Wige's fingers and clattered on the desk. Dennison restored it to its cradle with a bang.

"For God's sake, snap out of it, Lennon! What ails you? What's wrong, man?"

Wige pulled himself together with an effort. He seemed to speak mechanically.

"That was the sanitarium at Siloam Springs calling me. Miss Delaine was taking my brother there in her car. They had reached the gates and there was . . . an accident."

"Was Carol hurt?" The color was leaving Dennison's face. Wige nodded.

"Badly? Out with it!"

"They're not sure. My brother wasn't. He had them call me..."

"My God, it would have to be that way!" Chester snapped bitterly. He did not seem to notice that Wige was on his feet, his hands clenched. "Where is this damned place, anyway. Why did you let her—"

"Skip that!" Wige's voice was low. "I didn't know they were going on that trip, or had gone, until I went home last night. You can make whatever you like out of that."

"Thanks!" was the sarcastic retort. "Pull your wits together, if you don't mind. Try to tell me where this place is. What's that name again?"

"Siloam Springs. It must be close to two hundred miles . . . pretty nearly due south."

"Okay!" Chester spoke jerkily. "One of our cabin jobs flew in here last night. I'll get the pilot on the company line. Tell him to dope out the location and the nearest landing field. We can take off just as soon as we get hold of Delaine. That's the first thing. See if you can get him on the phone or locate him for me. Be easy how you break it to him. He's crazy about that girl. And tell him I'll pick him up at the house on my way to the field."

Dennison was already back in his chair and calling the plant over a private wire. Even while Wige was ringing the Steel house he could hear the other man barking a sharp order to get the pilot on the line. Emergency. Damn it, didn't they ever hear of that word?

Cassandra answered the phone. Andre had just left the house. She believed she could call him back. During the long pause Wige did not so much as glance in Dennison's direction. He was waiting, too. One foot tapping nervously on the floor.

"Hello!" It was Andy.

"Wige talking . . ."

"What's happened to Carol? Is she hurt?" Wige had no time to wonder how Andy knew or why he should be the one to break the news. "Where is she?" the father demanded before there was time for an answer.

"At Siloam Springs. The hospital called me. There was an accident. Carol was injured . . . they couldn't tell me much. I just . . ."

"Was your brother hurt?" Odd that he should wait to ask that.

"Not at all, they said."

"I wondered if that wasn't where she had gone. How soon can we start, Wige. You'll drive me down, won't you?"

"Mr. Dennison is planning to take you by air. He's trying to get in touch with his pilot right now. He said to tell you that he would pick you up in his car right away . . . as soon as you can get ready."

"That's good. It should be much quicker. Tell him . . . no, I'll thank him when I see him. You're going, of course?"

"Yes."

"I'll be waiting for you. Thanks very much, son." There had not been the slightest tremor in Andy's voice throughout the short conversation. He was as casual as though a pleasure flight were in prospect.

"You got him," Dennison commented. He was gathering up loose papers and tossing them in a desk drawer. "Bill Taylor knows where that place is; says he thinks there's a field close by. Hope so, though it won't take us long. I won't be away long myself, either. I don't believe there is anything here you can't handle for me, Lennon. I'll call up tomorrow morning."

SLEEPY STOCK MART PONDERS 1942 OUTLOOK

Indefinite Trends Found In First Day's Trading of Young New Year.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — A sleepy looking stock market today started the New Year with slightly indefinite trends.

While rails and scattered favorites managed to acquire fractional advances, many leaders slipped into a losing groove. Near the second hour numerous issues were unchanged.

Noteworthy was the reversion to sluggishness as the heavy tax selling of the past several weeks was removed as a volume motivator. The ticker tape frequently was at a standstill.

Both speculative and investment forces, brokers said, inclined to step lightly pending outcome of the battles in the Philippines and further federal action regarding rationing, priorities and price controls to overcome growing shortages in many lines.

Holders of merchandising shares found some satisfaction in the Dun & Bradstreet survey which disclosed that, while the usual post-Christmas spending relapse was pronounced, this week's retail activities throughout the country topped the comparable period a year ago by 8 to 14 per cent.

FEDERAL SALES BAN 'FREEZES' 200 CARS HERE

OPM Organizing Rationing System For Future Sale of New Vehicles.

activities will be stepped up, and some salesmen may be absorbed by those departments. Other salesmen will be shifted to used car sales. Under the order banning sales, any car driven less than 1,000 will be considered new and cars that have been driven more than 1,000 will fall under the category of "used."

OPM Priorities Director Donald M. Nelson said in Washington that an amendment to the ban on sales will be issued immediately to permit completion of conditional sales, chattel mortgages, and similar automobile purchase contracts when delivery was made prior to Jan. 1.

One local dealer delivered three new cars Wednesday, and another two new cars. In neither case was the title of any of the cars recorded, and the dealers proceeded to record the titles today.

However, the situation was somewhat uncertain as to the status of negotiations in which there had been some down payment prior to the effective date of the sales ban, but the car had not yet been delivered. The belief was expressed informally that the purchaser would be permitted to have his new car if the contract was entered into before issuance of the order prohibiting sales, but it was anticipated that an amendment would be issued clarifying this point.

Typical comment from Mansfield dealers as to effect of the order was:

M. K. Metzler, president, Mohican Crevrolet company—"We are expanding our service operation immediately and curtailing our sales activity. With sale of new cars prohibited, we will devote our sales effort entirely to used cars and this will take up some of the sales personnel. We are strengthening our parts and service departments, in order to keep in operation the cars now on the road."

C. J. Solomon, manager, Weidner Motor Sales—"It happens that in our organization we expect to lose several of our men to the army, and we will shift men from our sales force to those positions. We have strengthened our service department, and may absorb some salesmen there. We will do all we can to keep our present force intact so that we may have the same sales organization available when normal selling again is permitted."

The rationing set-up on new cars and trucks is expected to be in operation by Jan. 15. It will be supervised by Price Administrator Leon Henderson, whose office yesterday imposed drastic quotas reducing by about 90 per cent the number of new tires and tubes available for sale to civilians.

Richland county's allotment for January was set at 61 tires and 51 tubes for passenger cars, light trucks, and motorcycles, and 119 tires and 99 tubes for heavy trucks and buses. Since the allotments are issued on the basis of counties, rather than cities, plans were being made today to set up a county co-ordinating board to work out community quotas, according to Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the civilian defense committee.

The county board will co-ordinate the activities of the seven tire rationing boards in the county—those in Mansfield, Shelby, Bellville, Lexington, Butler, Shiloh, and Plymouth. The Mansfield board, headed by James Bailey, today was awaiting arrival of complete instructions and certificates which a prospective purchaser must obtain before a dealer may sell him a tire. New tire sales now are frozen, and the rationing system becomes effective next Monday.

Possibility that Junior's Christmas bicycle may become the family vehicle was seen if the war lasts two years. State defense council officials pointed out that the order banning sale of tires exempted bicycle tires. One official expressed belief most cars on the road will outlast their tires and said that when those tires are gone "you can expect to see America sitting on the bicycle seat again."

The local civilian defense committee will consider appointment of a consumers' interest committee, which will handle distribution of certain commodities, and a recreational and educational committee, at its regular weekly meeting tonight.

Also to be worked out is a program for enrollment of volunteers for civilian defense work through enlistment stations at various industrial plants of the city.

Kalbfleisch today announced appointment of 12 Mansfielders to attend the three-day Institute of Civilian and Industrial Protection, beginning next Monday at Ohio State university. The group, selected after a conference between Kalbfleisch and representatives of the Mansfield Manufacturers' association, includes:

A. D. McKenzie, Ohio Brass company; Charles R. Oberlin, Martin Steel Products company; John G. Routzon, secretary-manager, chamber of commerce; A. V. Ryon, Humphryes Manufacturing company; James F. Carrigan, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company; R. W. Berger, Mansfield Tire and Rubber company; Verne Kyle, Tappan Stove company; James S. Cairns, Ohio Fuel Gas company; Ernest Adams, city electrician; Chase Southworth, Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company; M. E. Giles, Ohio Public Service company, and a representative yet to be selected, from the Barnes Manufacturing company.

The order calling a halt in production of new automobiles after 30 days (the January quota for the industry is 102,000 units) will have far-reaching effects on employment.

Alvan Macauley, president of the Automobile Manufacturers association and chairman of the automotive council for war production, said in Detroit that the automobile industry was "100 per cent" behind the government. But he urged that additional contracts be awarded to automobile manufacturers to cushion dislocations.

"The government must give us work on which we can turn loose our mass production facilities," he said, "Plants will have to be shut down but just how many and for how long we can't say. It will depend in part on how rapidly we can get into production on new contracts."

R. J. Thomas, international president of the United Automobile Workers-CIO, predicted that when production actually is halted there will be 150,000 more men thrown out of work, in addition to the 150,000 already unemployed.

The union has contended for months that the industry was not producing war materials in suffient quantities. Items now being turned out by automobile manufacturers include tanks, airplane motors, guns, shells and a score of other weapons in addition to the army trucks and blitz buggies for which little change-over was needed.

Mansfield Aliens Warned to Turn In Cameras, Firearms

figures were available as to the number of Germans, Italians and Japanese.

Sheriff Robinson said he would immediately enlist the help of mayors and village marshals in the county in collecting the guns, explosives, radio equipment and cameras held by enemy nationals. The equipment must be turned in to the sheriff's office, police headquarters, and mayor's offices in county villages.

Chief Bates said a check-up will be made after the Monday night deadline and aliens who have failed to comply with the request will face imprisonment. Authorities will confiscate equipment not turned in voluntarily by persons affected by the order.

Radio transmitters and receivers covering the bands from 540 to 1,750 kilocycles and combination long and short-wave receiving sets will be impounded. The cameras under ban included portable equipment, either still or motion picture cameras. Studio or fixed cameras may be retained but they must be reported to police in writing.

Officers receiving the articles will issue receipts to the owners and store the equipment for safe keeping pending further instructions from Washington.

Enemy aliens may move about as usual in their home communities, commuting where necessary, and may enter government buildings on business. All other travel must be with the permission of the district attorney, after the alien has submitted in writing, one week in advance, complete information as to his name, nationality, alien registration number, purpose of the trip, dates of return and departure, details of stops, routes to be followed and the carrier to be used.

Violation of the regulations will make offenders liable to internment.
